

Students Were Advised In Selecting Vocations During Career Week In GHS, May 4-8

Career Clinic Week was held in GHS May 4-8 to help advise students in selecting a vocation or a career.

Under the sponsorship of the SA Library Committee advised by Miss Cora Fuller Collier, librarian, and one of the Distributive Education Classes taught by Miss Frances Bayne, the Career Clinic reached approximately 480 students.

The four main features of the week were talks by Mr. James Butler, Mr. J. C. Gresham, Miss Mary Ames, and Mr. Harold Jeters.

Forty-eight juniors and seniors attended conferences during Career Week with the various teachers who volunteered to discuss types of work open to high school students after graduation.

The teachers that were interviewed and their subjects are: Miss Collier and Mrs. Cox, filing; Mrs. White, colleges; Mr. Helms, radio and chemistry; Mrs. McManus, nursing; and Mr. Askins, aeronautics, electrical engineering, machinist, sheet metal, and welding.

Career Booklet Distributed

Miss Collier with the help of Catherine Page and Charles O'Steen, students, and commercial students who did the typing, under the direction of Miss Mabel Hamer, prepared a booklet adapted from one on careers made by Miss Hallie Sykes of Charlotte. This 24-page booklet, a copy of which was given to all seniors, listed all information on careers which is in the GHS Library. The list had a total of 308 books.

During Career Week the library featured many interesting and helpful displays.

Posters showing the value of vocational guidance were displayed.

Arranged on tables were books pertaining to the following careers: nursing, medicine, armed services, secretarial work, teaching, special work, skilled labor, all defense of engineering, library science, professional sports, ministry, journalism, acting, law, photography, homemaking, designing, special work, agriculture, hotel management, architecture, art, printing, detective work, chemistry, inventing, advertising, merchandising, banking, aeronautics, and civil service. Information on colleges was also displayed.

Radio Program Given

Career Week ended with a radio program given by Distributive Education classes. The D. E. students were interviewed by Pearl Lee, who acted as an inquiring reporter. They explained how they got their jobs, where they were,

Miss Ames Explains Civil Service Work

Miss Mary Ames, from Washington, D. C., representative of the fourth civil service district, spoke to approximately 100 students interested in applying for civil service jobs, in the GHS library May 7, as another feature of Career Clinic Week.

Miss Ames said that a large number of applicants failed to follow directions when they were taking their examinations. She emphasized that one must follow directions while taking the examinations, as one part of the examination is a general test to see if the applicant can do as he is told.

To be eligible for the field examination the person must be at least sixteen; however for the departmental examinations the applicant must be eighteen or over.

Miss Ames explained that departmental service is work done in Washington, D. C., and field service is done in all other places.

Miss Ames stated that she would try to have the field examinations given in GHS to those who are interested, where there are plenty of typewriters, as the applicant has to furnish his own typewriter. She said that if a special representative could give the examination, the result would be known sooner, as he has the authority to check and grade the papers. The special representative can also make appointments.

their duties, and some of their experiences at work. To close the program Miss Bayne gave a summary of the D. E. program.

Willing Helpers!

When you go into the Library, who is the one that is always willing to help you? Miss Cora Fuller Collier, librarian! Who is not only interested in her Distributive Education students, but in every student who is interested in getting a job? It's Miss Frances Bayne! Yes, these two have certainly been a great help to GHS this year in many ways. Career Clinic Week, under their sponsorship, aided the seniors in choosing their careers. Miss Bayne and Miss Collier state that they were well pleased with the week's work and they hope that Career Clinic Week will become an annual event.

Speakers Say:

Mr. James Butler, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce told of the possibilities and opportunities open for different jobs in Goldsboro. The open fields, in Mr. Butler's opinion, are office law, banking positions, and social service.

Mr. Harold Jeters, district Supervisor of the NYA, explained two possible programs under the NYA, organized to train young people to be more efficient workers. One is the concentrated program given at home, and the other is the training given in a training camp where life is like that in college. The average person can finish NYA training in three months, but is allowed to stay for six months. He emphasized the importance of getting all the education possible before applying for NYA work.

Mr. J. C. Gresham, Head of the Employment Bureau in Goldsboro, led an open forum on questions concerning age limits and types of jobs that could be received this summer.

Librarian Plans Quiz On Use of Library

As an added phase of Career Clinic Week, Miss Collier is planning a quiz to be given before school is out on How to Use The Library to help college preparatory students next year.

Miss Collier has received from several colleges form examinations that will be given to the students entering college next fall.

In order to prepare students for this test, Miss Collier has booklets she will distribute that will aid them to prepare for the quiz. This booklet has been condensed from the "Library" article in "The World Book Encyclopedia".
