After the program was over

 this reporter asked several of the parents the question, "Did the workshop change your opinion of math and science for high school students?" The parents interview ed were of the same opinion; they had always thought math and science should be stressed in high school because it can be used in later life and the workshop only helped them realize this more.
'Bird's on Review'

'Behind the Pages'
Since interruptions and headaches all go with publishing THE BLACKBIRD, the staff wants its public to see "behind the pages". From beginning to end, here's what happens. Members are as signed beats to cover by the editor. (A beat is a route to cover for the latest news.) After "beat sheets" are in, articles are assigned to reporters.
Page editors' headaches start after they have drawn "layouts" (blueprints of their pages). Articles don't pan out; some must be "killed" (ommitted) for various reasons.
Deadlines make everybody rush to write, check, rewrite, and type articles and compose headlines. As articles come in (sometimes late) the paper begins to take shape.
Somewhere in the rush, the art editor finds time to work with the cameraman. The advertising manager sees that all ad copy is on the right page. Finally, the paper goes to the printer, but until the staff sees the paper actuallyy in print, their worries aren't over
So, mast of the work the staff does is "behind the pages" with plenty of headaches.
However, after all this rush and work, the staff unanimousiy votes, "We love it."

EC Band Includes Seven RM Grads In Local Concert Seven Rocky Mount graduates "made music" as members of the 60 piece East Carolina College Concert Band in assembly Friday, Feibruary 1.
Ralph Chason, ' Ken Killebrew, George Knight, Boots Malone, Joyce Pierce, Linwood Pitiman, and Bill Sexton gave their Alma Mater reason to be proud as their college band entertained with a program of dance music, marches, classical pieces, and jazz selections.
Mr. Herbert L. Carter, director of the ensemble introduced and explained the legends of all selections which included the Railroad Suite. Mr. Carter said he thought this suite was especially suitable since Rocky| Mount is a railroading town. The suite was divided into three movements: Casey Jones, John Henry, and Old Susanna!
At the conclusion of the program, the Collegians, a fourteenpiece dance band, played two po pular numbers: "Too Young To Go Steady" and Jump for Joe" Two of the above-mentioned alumni, Ralph Chason and George Knight, are also members of this group.
group.
The Collegians is one of several dance bands that the juniors are considering for this year's JuniorSenior Prom
