"I was startled, but honored to be chosen Kiwanis boy for October," said Frank Inscoe, senior class president.

Frank is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Inscoe of 723 Falls Road. As president of the senior class, Frank has become very involved in his school. He wants to give the students, especially the seniors, an opportunity to participate in the activities of Rocky Mount Senior High. In achieving this goal, Frank has started two committees. The gift committee will plan what type of gift the senior class will give to RMSH. The senior privileges committee, which must be started again every year, will give the seniors special privileges. Along with his responsibilities as president, Frank is a member of the National Honor Society and a player on the boy's tennis team.

Outside of the school, Frank enjoys practicing tennis, flying kites, skate boarding, and of course chasing girls. He also works at Kerr Drugs in Tarrytown Mall and attends Falls Road Baptist Church and its youth group.

In furthering his education after high school, Frank plans to attend the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md. He believes that it provides a good opportunity for a person with his interests.

Every Thursday of the month, Frank will attend the Kiwanis Club Luncheon at the YMCA as an honored guest. Being Kiwanis boy, he will receive a free dictionary. So if anyone, in the next few weeks, sees a tall, slender, dark-haired boy with a great big smile on his face thumbing through a book; remember that it's Frank Inscoe looking through his FREE dictionary.

VICA-ICT Clubs Attend Conference

The leadership conference and hopes for a successful barbecue sale heightened activity for VICA-ICT students in October.

The leadership conference was attended by the ICT officers and provided meaningful assistance for them. The purpose of the conference was to prepare and instruct the officers concerning the requirements and demands of their respective offices. At the conference, groups were set up, separating the presidents in one, vice presidents in another, and the treasurers and secretaries in another.

The main money-making project for ICT in the near future will be the barbecue sale. It will be held in November, with the money going to pay for the leadership conference, state contests, and the employees banquet in the spring. The committees have been set up to work sales, and the top salesmen having sold 20 or more orders will receive a free steak dinner.

The new ICT officers have been chosen, and they are David Thompson, president; Andre Bisette, first vice president; Pamela Wilson, second vice president; secretary, Vicky Tanner; treasurer, Earl Yemens; and editor, Mike Tapia.

Cowgirl Twirls Again

Why does Judy Rivenbark carry a rifle with her wherever she goes? Because she is a member of the Rifle Guard and is true to her title. She knows that in order to be successful, she must practice.

Judy works part-time as a cashier at Kerr Drug's. She carries her rifle to work everyday and whenever she's not waiting on a customer, she pulls out her handy practice rifle and goes through her routine behind the counter. Once one of her fellow workers saw her practicing and exclaimed, "What are you doing?" Judy sweetly replied, "I'm practicing to ride shotgun in my carpool next week."

Although Judy jokes about her rifle, she takes her practice very serious. Even on weekends, when she is supposed to rest and enjoy herself, this girl cannot break her habit of constant practice. Wherever she goes, be it on a date or just out to have a good time with friends, her rifle goes too. Wherever the monotony becomes too great to bear, and she realizes she is bored, Judy simply pulls out her rifle and starts to practice.

Judy attributes her success in the Rifle Guard to her childhood ambition. "I always wanted to be a cowgirl," she said, "and a member of the Rifle Guard is as close to a cowgirl as I ever came. After all, I get to wear a full skirt, boots, and a hat and best of all, I get to carry a rifle."

Although Judy's friends have tried to break her from this embarrassing habit, they have not been very successful. She continues to practice with no concern as to where she is and with no concern as to how many potential friends she has scared away. (Picture yourself walking up to a group of girls you'd like to become friends with, and suddenly one of them pulls a rifle out). But being faithful friends, they will stand by her and will continue to applaud whenever she finishes a practice routine.

Although this account may be a little difficult to digest, don't doubt its contents. Judy is not unique; she is just one of the many hard-working members of the band. After all, haven't you ever heard the old saying, "Practice makes perfect."

Mini-Parade Creates Interest

Paper, paint, bubble gum, wagons: These were the makings of the Homecoming Mini-Parade.

All told, 26 entries were in the spectacle, and by the end, the "cream" had been chosen. First place went to the Masquers, second to Homeroom 204, and third place went to Homeroom 120. "The best pep rally/mini-parade in years" was how several teachers described the event, and the service club expressed its appreciation for the support it received.

Time, money, work (after school, even), all played an important part. The originality of RMSH students climbed to new heights when Homecoming time rolled around. "How can we get a tail to stay on" and "What if the wheels fall off." were questions frequently voiced and a day or two before the big event, you could almost feel the tenseness (and terror) of participants. Still, most of the students believed that it was worth the effort and worry and bother. "When you do the best you can do and feel proud of your work, then you have a good float" was the consensus of most of the students participating in the parade.
