Christmas vacation has finally arrived, and not a minute too soon. Eager eyes have peeked into the hall closets and under Dad's bed and found new rifles, boots, fishing gear, and other sporting accessories, making the wait worthwhile. And now, thirteen days of hunting before returning to brag on the kill.

An amusing anecdote—A father took his 10 year old son with him to a local hunting club. He left him with a gun and five buck shot and told him to shoot at anything he saw other than the dogs. A few minutes later, the father heard five loud blasts and returned to the place he'd left his son. When he got there, he found that his son had shot at and killed seven pigs with five shots.

Ingenuity, not variety, is the spice of life! When nothing better is available, a tobacco pipe serves well to call wild turkeys. To imitate a lost hen, pucker your lips over the stem and suck air inward works amazingly!

Tip for the duck hunter! If you forget your metalgame carrier and hate to carry wet, slimy birds, do not fret! Simply stretch out the loops of the plastic holders that hold a six-pack of beer or soda. Double each loop and stick the bird's head in. The weight of the bird will pull the loop tight.

If you know that your clean-up job will leave your hands black with grease and oil, and you don't want the trouble of scrubbing them clean, try this: Saturate your hands with petroleum jelly before you begin. When the job is over, the jelly will be easily removed with soap and water, along with the grease and oil.
