Creative Writing Pupils Honored

If Plato was right when he said, "art is the imitation of beauty," Mrs. Peggie Murray must be teaching a class full of mirrors in her creative writing class, for three of her students, Melanie Ann Morgan, Babbette Brown, and Mary Ann Reid have received honorable mention awards in a National creative writing contest sponsored by Scholastic Magazines.

The official title for the contest was "Students In-Sight Competition." The students were to write a creative essay on "My 1976 World: What's Important to Me and My Generation in _____" (the writers filled in the blank with whatever topic they were going to pursue). After reading each letter that had to be postmarked by October 16, 1976 the Scholastic Magazine judges awarded eight $250 scholarships, 16 cash prizes and 50 honorable mentions, of which three came to Rocky Mount Senior High. The winners will be announced in the February 1977 Campus offer.

Selection Of Couple Postponed

Teresa Everette, chairman of the Human Relations Committee, has announced that the selection of the Human Relations Couple has been suspended.

The committee has decided to postpone the selection of the couples because they feel that the selection criteria needs to be changed. The committee also feels they are not familiar with the student body.

To Participate In Child Care Services Juniors Required Child Care Course

Sophomores who would like to enroll in Child Care Services, a two hour block course, are required to have a semester of Child Care Development in their Junior year. One must be a Senior in order to take Child Care Services.

Child Care Services involves classroom and on-the-job training. Students go by bus to six child care centers, Christ Child Day Care, Weeks-Armstrong Headstart, and Mount Pisgah Presbyterian Church Day Care, Raleigh Road Headstart, Braswell School Kindergarten, and Developmental Disabilities Center.

Mrs. Pat Epps said, "The girls do everything a director would do. They help with play time, naps, meals, and helping students on a one-to-one basis. The girls spend three days in a center and two days in the class," Mrs. Epps reported.

Homework isn't required in the program unless a center director wants the girls to plan the next days lesson.

The course is something for girls who haven't decided what they're going to do after high school. Senior High wanted to increase opportunities for the students who will receive little or no training after high school. However, college bound students can benefit from the program.

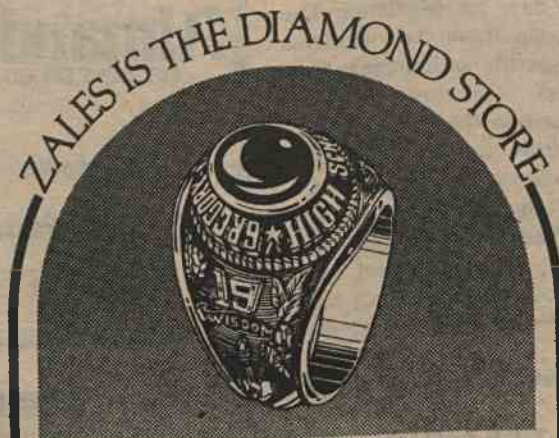

The students rotate centers every six or nine weeks depending on when they can get started with their lessons.
