Girls Participate In Bricklaying

For the first time in the history of Rocky Mount Senior High girls are participating in the bricklaying classes.

Pam Holland, Nancy Smithson and Tamela Willis are now spending two hours every school day in bricklaying class. During fifth and sixth period the female bricklayers learn to mix and spread mortar, build brick corners and walls and other masonry skills.

Mr. Paul Jenkins, the teacher of the class, said that the girls do everything the boys do and seem to enjoy the class.

Tamela Willis commented that she took the class because it was a course girls usually don't take. She also said that she enjoyed the class very much.

Nancy Smithson and Pam Holland stated that they took the class because it was fun and interesting. They also said that they took the class because there is no homework.

Michael Ward and Anthony

Waterman agreed that they enjoyed having girls in the class. They also commented that the girls did as good or even better job bricklaying than the boys.
