

Here and There

THEY KNEW THAT ONE of the inevitable would happen. Somewhere he had made a slip. "Wait!" "I hear him coming," some one screamed. "I knew he would make it."

No, you're wrong. This isn't an acting movie serial, but the morning scene in Miss Matheson's home room. The hero just did make it isn't Dick or Wild Bill Elliot, but Sid Efrid, who has a hard time remembering that school starts at 8.

MRS. PEIFFER HAD GIVEN the twelfth grade English class a group of questions to answer. The first she said, would be a thought question.

After correcting the papers, Mrs. Peiffer said, "Joe Aldridge didn't answer that last question."

"But," Joe protested, "you said it was a thought question, and I thought about it."

A LOVER OF MILKSHAKES, "I'm not," said Joe Morton to Jack Hatley and Jack Palmer as they went into Tate's Drug to get their dinner.

"Yes, sir," continued Joe, "there's nothing better than a milkshake."

They ordered their dinner and being the hungriest, ordered a milkshake to set off his appetite. It was then that Jack and Joe became unusually talkative and friendly. They kept Joe's head wandering from one side of the store to the other drawing his attention to this and then that article.

Finally they announced that they were ready to go and told the waiter to hurry and finish his milkshake. Joe quickly gulped the rest of the drink, and his eyes became glassy. In the bottom of the cup were four partly dissolved pills.

"GOO GOO" GANTT, struggling with an algebra problem, admitted defeat and asked Miss Caughman for assistance. She helped him work the problem. Miss Caughman said triumphantly, "I'll bet you ten dollars you're right."

Goo Goo turned to the back of the room. Suddenly he yelled: "I'll bet you. It's wrong."

"Why?" said Miss Caughman, "how did you miss it?"

MISS TUCKER: "Miss Matheson, do you have any news from the typing department for the Full Moon?"

Miss Matheson: "No, but I'll have some one break a leg something for next time."

HONESTLY, MISTER, I've never paid for it!"

When Carol Rogers walked into the barber stand in Lexington on Friday night after being paraded and drowned at the game with her Home, she was well aware of the fact that she was no beauty with her hair plastered to her head, her clothes wrinkled, and her shoes socks muddy, but she was unprepared for what followed.

Carol was fondly fingering her penny (which was all she had after paying for a barbecue) when suddenly it slipped from her hand and rolled to the feet of a man sitting next to her.

Carol actually she reached for the penny, remarking as she did so that she had never seen her last cent in the world.

Carol can well imagine her surprise when the forementioned man actually picked up the penny and handed it to her. "Thank you, Mister, I've already paid for it!" Carol insisted.

Carol's pleas were to no avail, and Carol was forced to give the money from a well-meaning orphan who, believing her to be a beggar from Barium, was doing his good deed.

FULL MOON STAFF

Pictured above is Mrs. Fry's twelfth grade English class which is serving as the Full Moon staff. Left to right, seated, first row: Martin Ussery, Betty Pennington, Ann Johnson, Carol Rogers, Idaline Lowder, Avalyne Thomas, and Elnora Smith. Second row: Elsie Tucker, Jane Gullede, Miriam Whitley, Lillian Gaskin, Jean Bowers, Betty Bowers, Jean Sides, Jenece Lowder, and Lou Merle Griffin. Third row: Alex Moorehead, Jeannette Sells, Madge Harris, Audrey Thompson, and Betty Lou Hatley. Back row: Eugene Speight, Bill Ridenhour, Joanne Cook, Doris Mauldin, Joyce Tucker, Mildred Aldridge, and Sue Fowler. Standing: Tom Hinson, Horace Lowder, and Maxine Burris. Seated on abutment: Totsie Little, Gerald Rummage, "Shotgun" Talbert, and Jim Ivey.

Reports Indicate Apple-for-Teacher Business Thriving

Apple orchards around Albemarle must be almost bare. Certainly something must have prompted all these honor reports. Here is a list of the scholars who had no car-shed blues when they carried home those fatal cards.

Eighth grade highest honor: Betty Brunson, Joe Gaskin, Sylvia Morrow, Nancy Morrow, Sue Redfern, Janice Scott, Barbara Crowell, Nancy Jo Haynes, Angeline Hopkins, Ann Reeder Daniel, Virginia Helms, William Litaker.

Eighth grade honor: Phyllis Callicut, Margaret Griffin, Betty Sue Rogers, Jimmy Skidmore, Billy Lisk, Randall Plyler, Catherine Atkins, Lewis Klutz, Nancy Meachum, Lovell Moose, Jane Russell, Ann Swaringen, Jeanette Troutman, Patsy Pettit, Doris Rogers, Patsy Williford, Carol Jo Herrin, Carolyn Jones, Lina Belle Lamar, Douglas Knotts, James Lisk, Don Smith, Harold Smith, Genoal Carpenter, O'Lema Aldridge, Betty Davis, Kathryn Kimrey, Janet Mauldin, Emily Milton, Jane McDowell, Reggie Stoker, Johnny Eagle.

Ninth grade honor: Jane Little, Elbert Whitley, Carolyn Simpson, Joyce Scott, Dillon Lambert, Betty Jean Poplin, Jane Rogers, Angela Moncrief, Martha Bell Knight, Lucille Curlee, Lillian Copley, Jo Ann Burrell, Jimmie Groves, William Bradley, Charles Litaker, Tommy Morris, Virginia Brown, Lucille Burr, Elizabeth Elder, Dorothy Gaskin, Helen Harwood, Nell Hatley, Phyllis Klutz, Jane Smith, Birdie Suggs, Frankie Williams, Don Wagner, Betty Sells, John Boyett.

Tenth grade highest honor: Elene Holbrook, Anne Milton, Martha Moore, Connie McLain, Elizabeth Starr.

Tenth grade honor: Cranford Hathcock, Sara Skidmore, Sarah Frances Poplin, Jean Bullock, Jane Bullock, Dwight Cranford, Bernice Crump, Henry Forrest, June Freeman, William Grigg, Elbert Holt, Tommy Sibley, Barbara Smith, Monzelle Talbert, Hattie Tucker, Bobby Barringer, Gaynelle Chandler, Henry Efrid, Kathleen Hudson, Bill Klutz, Jack Morton, Curtis Ragsdale, Peggy Ragsdale, Peggy Redfern, Barbara Setzler, Larry Lowder.

(Continued on page six)

Full Moon Staff Chosen

Fry Is President Of Choral Group

Paul B. Fry, high school choral director, was elected president of the choral division of the North Carolina Music Education association at a recent meeting of the group at Woman's College in Greensboro. His duties as president of this organization will be chiefly to help plan choral events in district and state contests.

Mr. Fry, who is widely known for his musical ability, was also recently re-elected to the office of secretary of the South Piedmont District Teachers association at a meeting held in Charlotte.

Those attending the Music Conference from Albemarle besides Mr. Fry were Spencer Hatley, high school band director; Mrs. J. W. Almond, public school music supervisor; and Misses Mary Hearne and Annyce Worsham.

Throughout the day, clinics and demonstrations were held for band, choral, orchestra directors, and piano teachers. Plans for conducting the next State High School Music-Festival were discussed.

No Ham? No Eggs? No Eat!

Albemarle students and faculty are as divided in their opinions on "meatless Tuesdays" and "poultryless Thursdays" as the nation as a whole seems to be.

Jean Taylor figures if Europe is in need of food America can help her, and Jimmy Thompson feels that if we were in Europe's condition we would want the same thing and maybe more.

Ann Johnson says, "I am entirely against it because charity begins at home and before we take it on ourselves to feed the world we should feed the starving people in our own country."

Having one meatless day set aside each week will provide more food for those countries and also bring down market prices in America, Charles Reap thinks, while Cliff Harkey feels that "meatless Tuesdays" should not be counted on to bring down prices and help save the grain crops but

Editor Is Jean Bowers; Business Manager, Jeannette Sells

Jean Bowers has been chosen to serve as editor of the Full Moon this year and Jeannette Sells as business manager.

Other members of the staff are Lou Merle Griffin, assistant editor; Elnora Smith, news editor; Miriam Whitley, feature editor; and Jim Ivey, sports editor.

Madge Harris will act as assistant business manager and Jean Sides, Doris Mauldin, and Maxine Burris exchange editors, with Gerald Rummage, Totsie Little, and Martin Ussery advertising managers.

The feature writers include Jane Gullede, Ann Johnson, Lillian Gaskin, Carol Rogers, Sue Fowler, Avalyne Thomas, Idaline Lowder, Joyce Tucker, and Bill Ridenhour.

Alex Moorehead, Horace Lowder, Eugene Speights, Tom Hinson and Shotgun Talbert are the sports writers.

Elsie Tucker, Betty Lou Hatley, Mildred Aldridge, Betty Pennington, Joanne Cook, Jenece Lowder, Audrey Thompson, Betty Bowers and Margaret Cole make up the staff of news reporters.

should be only one of the steps to relieve the shortages.

Margaret Griffin believes that if the American people would be conservative each day we could have meat seven days a week and have plenty for the millions of starving people.

Miss Holbrooks, librarian, and Mrs. Hatley and Mrs. Russell, dietitians, agree in thinking that America has not sacrificed enough and there are plenty of meat substitutes which we can use.

Frank Winecoff is strongly opposed to meatless Tuesdays because some people don't observe this and some do. He thinks that if everyone were asked to save meat instead of setting apart one day it would be more of a success.

Pansy Page and Rachel Gilbert feel that if we are asked by the government to have "meatless Tuesdays" we should co-operate. They believe the results will be

(Continued on page six)

Students Sign Up For Various Clubs

Members of the high school faculty are sponsoring a number of different clubs to meet at activity period from one to three days each week.

Typing Club.

The typing club, sponsored by Miss Matheson, has an enrollment of fifty-five. These are divided into two groups, one to meet on Monday, the other on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Its purpose is to help students create a better technique in typing and to catch up on any back assignments.

Bible Clubs

Miss Harrison is sponsoring nine-week Bible clubs for students of the four eighth grades. Mrs. Saunder's room is the first club.

Officers of this club are Paula Howard, president; Betty Lynn Crowell, vice president; Betty Brunson, secretary and treasurer.

An oral contest on readings from the Old Testament is being held between the boys and girls. The losers are to give a treat to the winners.

Creative Writing Club.

The club on creative writing has an enrollment of thirteen. It is being sponsored by Mr. McFadyen and will meet on Wednesdays.

(Continued on page six)

Senior Committee Members Chosen

The members of the committees of the senior class were appointed October 6, by the class officers—Buddy Lowder, president; Cecil Hatley, vice-president; Anita Ledbetter, secretary; Bob Gantt, treasurer.

George Winecoff, chairman of the Gift Committee, announced that its members—Anita Ledbetter, Miriam Whitley, Bob Gantt, and Gene Brooks—will not disclose the gift until the end of the year.

The Annual Committee — Jane Redwine, chairman; Alex More—

(Continued on page six)

By Their Words

"I think there is something crooked behind these long skirts." —Miss Spears.

"Let's translate this French, Miss Maxwell. It would be much more interesting if we knew what we were talking about." —Carol Rogers, reading French orally.

"I know why ends are called ends because they're on the end." —Miss Caughman.

"It isn't necessary to smoke to graduate from high school." —Mr. McFadyen.

"Sprechen sie deutch?" (Do you speak German?) —Harry Pawlik.

"Has anyone seen my grade book?" —Miss Matheson.

"I'm sitting up here saying cute things, but nobody will listen to me." —Mr. Fry to Mixed Chorus after trying to be heard above their chatter.

"If you fellows have strength to lift a fork, we'll eat supper." —Coach Webb to team after Children's Home game.

"A saber is when you're not drunk." —Donald Earnhardt.

"Davy Jones is boodon of oscannd where piroet go." —Claude Harwood.

"It may not be good English, but it's good American." —Miss Maxwell.

"The girl ate her dinner out of a contemplate (meaning common tin plate)." —V. L. Harwood when asked to make a sentence using the word.

"All those who are absent stand up so the teacher can make a list." —Sara Archer when Miss Matheson had lost her grade book.

"Bet I'll have fried shorthand for lunch." —Mattie Sue Lucas after fire drill.