Second Division Tallies Major Strategic Victory

By SANDAL VAN OKRA

The Second Division of the Grand Rudolfendorffan Army scored a major victory here today in driving out Webbland from this key vehicles testing grounds.

Led by Gen. Sir Ronald Swan-ner, 1965 winner of the coveted KKK Good Sportsmanship Award, the Rudolfendorffian Army staved off a second half comeback by the enemy infantrymen. The opposing forces succumbed when Major Steven R. Vanderburg succeeded in capturing Sally L. Efird, Webb-land National Merit Heroine's Medal winner and commander des-Medal winner and commander des-Medal winner and commander des-ignate of the Third Webbland Scholar's division. Vanderburg, who on occasion works under the alias Count S. T. Payne, stated that unless he obtains from her "information pertinent to the im-minent encroachment on the part of the opposition upon any terrain of the opposition upon any terrain owned or occupied by our forces," he would continue to hold her for Ransom. Miss Efird was quoted as saying, "Someone is violating my constitutional rights."

Reports attribute today's victory to vast amounts of information supplied by the impavid master of espionage, Agent 00982, who is in fact Col. Ned Hammond, who spent a great deal of time in the capital of Webbland, Office-on-the-Hall. At the close of his investi-gation he was found out, but he was fortunate in escaping with his wife. Only one casualty of any consequence was reported, and this was in the Webbland ranks. Third Dep-uty to the Fouth Assistant Res-cuer Chuck Morehead inadvertantly dropped his world-famous teddy bear, "Ralph" (affectionately so named for his brother Ralph Mann Morehead, Webbland Secretary of Morehead, Webbland Secretary of the Posterior). The incident oc-curred as Morehead was rushing to the aid of PLC (Private Last Class) Gerald "The Banjo" Bea-ver. Beaver had become delirious as the cruel war was raging, and began throwing away autographed 4" x 5" glossy prints of Burney, which is the major source of reve-nue for the impecunious Webb-land government. After "The Ban-jo" had played out, Morehead re-turned to find Chaplain James Gantt hovering over the multi-turned to find Chaplain James Gantt hovering over the multi-lated body of "Ralph." Samuel Truette, War Minister, was reportedly "greatly impressed by the 100% effort displayed by the Rudolfendorffian charges in gar-nering such a victory over the Webbland aggregation."

Coley Captures North Wing Eugene Coley, a powerful lead-er of Rudolfendorfian forces, sin-gle-handedly took the north wing. Shooting his way into the en-trance, he hacked his way into the various sectors of his objective various sectors of his objective with an old Bavarian sabre made with an old Bavarian sabre made of heat-resistant Terry cloth given to him by Paul Ahdul of Ellis. The bold Coley, wounded 12 times by Webbland bullets, collapsed soon after he had captured the north wing. He died afterwards from loss of blood. His body was dis-posed of by Calvin Pembleton. "'His body burned very well," stated Calvin afterwards.

The Western District North Caro-lina Student Council Congress de-manded earlier today that a cease-fire be called in the war between Rudolfendorff and Webbland and that negotiations be immediately begun for a treaty. The demands were made by George Krichbaum, president of the Congress in a speech delivered to the guiding committee of the Congress, the Bluebirds. Bluebirds.

Walter Smith, Prime Minister of Webbland sent a letter immedi-ately to the WDNCSCC stating that he was in full agreement with Mr. Krichbaum.

Charles II of Rudolfendorff sent his special aide Heath Godfrey to the office of Mr. Krichbaum to protest the WDNCSS's meddling in aftest the WDNCSS's medding in al-fairs that do not concern it. In an official press release by the Rudolfendorffian Press Agency, the duke was quoted as saying, "The Duchy of Rudolfendorff is a peace-loving nation defending it-self against the vicious aggres-sion of Webbland. This is a mat-ter which does not concern the ter which does not concern the WDNCSCC and for this reason Rudolfendorff will no longer co-operate with this organization until it

Taylor Attacks Webbland Troop

Considerable guerilla fighting oc-curred at the East entrance, soon after the major engagement took place between the Webbland and Rudolfendorffian forces. The Ru-dolferndorffian Rangers under the command of Colonel Thomas Tay-lor made several "hit and run" assaults upon the east entrance, defended by the 36th Special Guard of Webbland, commanded by Joe Rabon. Considerable losses were received by each side yet the Ru-dolfendorffian forces supported by light artillery and machine gun fire dealt much more damage up-on the desperate Webbland troops. It is reported that the Rudolfen-dorffian attack will be reinforced soon by several tank units, need ed desperately after the 22nd Ru-dolfendorffian armored division's disastrous defeat on the plains tennis courts by the Webbland anti-tank forces at the beginning of the commanded.

The Rudolfendorffian High Com-mand reported at 10:30 p.m. to-day that Office-on-the-Hall, the capital city of Webbland, had fall-en to the seige of the armies of the Grand Duchy of Rudolfen-dorff. Since the first invasion on March 20 the GDR armies have advanced steadily toward the

Invading Forces Crush Defenses

Another crushing defeat was suf-fered by the forces of Webbland when soldiers of the Grand Duchy of Rudolfendorff stormed the First Division during one of the most heated battles of the war so far. heated battles of the war so far. The First Division consists of the area including and adjoining the gym, auditorium, and the lobby. ficers, outfoxed the Webbland forc-es, resulting in their surrender and the signing of a most humiliating peace treaty. General Bill "Blood 'n' guts" Trivette directed the attack and victory on the gym. This tremen-dous victory was won by the Ru-dolfendorff forces only through the courage, stamina, and number of their soldiers. Heading this onslaught were General Trivette's two best colonels. Colonel Ralph two best colonels, Colonel Ralph Z. Mann, and Colonel Roger "Co-chise" Hartsell. These officers pro-vided examples of courage in bat-tle that proved to be inspiration to all man involved in Battle of to all men involved in Battle of the Gym. The Webbland officers, seeing that their men were unable to check such a torrent of brave men, wisely retreated through the lounge. As they retreated, they followed the "scorched earth" pol-icy; in addition, they melted down all the trophies in the lounge to make new brass buttons for all officers. The forces of Webbland finally stopped their retreat in the auditorium and regarded this as their east major stronghold.

Both forces by-passed the cafeteria since the neutrality act of 1964 had declared this area a neutral zone in which no fighting was to take place. The neutrality act was observed and carried out by each side.

The Webbland leader, Major Kelly Jones, ordered his two best captains, Captains Johnny Morris and Charles Daniel to strengthen the fortifications of the auditorium capital. Forces first captured the gymnasium on that date and, by-passing the cafeteria (and who wouldn't?) put the auditorium un-der their control two days later. Subsequent invasions from all di-rections put more and more ter-ritory into the hand of the Budolfritory into the hand of the Rudolfendorffians until Office-on-the-Hall and the male Teachers' Lounge were the only remaining areas.

King H. T. I has fled his king-dom and his whereabouts have not as yet been discovered. GDR forces have captured Chief of Staff R. C. Hatley and Minister of Health, Education and Welfare, Dane Perry, and are at present holding them under house arrest.

The Prime Minister, Mark Cook of Rudolfendorff, has stated his terms for surrender although they have not as yet been accepted by Walter Smith the Webbland Prime Minister.

Air Corps Strikes At Right Flank

The Rudolfendorffian Air Force made several straffing runs upon the right flank of the Webbland forces entrenched in the hedge-rows behind the Track-Field. The 12th Rudolfendorffian Airborne Di-vision upon the propert of the vision upon the request of the Grand Duken Charles Morton to speed up the war in Webbland made many bombing and straffing runs. The Webbland 2nd battalion was completely annilated along with their brilliant field command-er General William Sherrill. He was found draped across the land-ing gear of a Rudolfendorffian bomber.

Colonel Hartsell took his men and slipped them behind the Webbland lines while Colonel Man kept the Webbland soldiers engaged on the front. Colonel Hartsell slipped into the auditorium from behind and to the auditorium from behind and caught Major Jones completely off-guard in this pincer's movement. Seeing defeat was inevitable and inescapable, Major Jones and Cap-tains Morris and Daniel surrender-ed after only a few brief skir-mishes mishes.

Thus, the Treaty of Peaches, signed in the cafeteria, ended the War of the First Division. Signing for the Grand Duchy of Rudolfen-dor.'f was General Trivette, Colo-nol Ralph Z. Mann, and Colonel Roger Hartsell; signing for the defeated Webbland forces were Major Lones Cantain Morris and tain Morris, Major Jones, C. Captain Daniel. The cafeteria staff witnessed the event and served sausage and grits to all the men

R. Forces Suffer Heavy Losses

Rudolfendorffian forces sustain-ed enormous losses after a sui-cidal assault upon the strong west side of the Webbland defenses. This maniacal attack by the 13th division led by "Mad Man" Buck Snuggs received losses of nearly 100 me after racing into the point Snuggs received losses of nearly 100 men after racing into the point blank fire of small arms and ma-chine guns put up by the 1st di-vision led by that swasbuckling of-ficer Lieutenant Gary Furr who took the command from Command-er Bobby Overcash. Overcash was relieved after an acute case of bettle folime of battle fatigue.

Colonel Snuggs who refused to head to the warnings of his aides marched into the hail of bullets, his men armed only with sabres. The Rudolfendorffian forces finally broke and beat a hasty retreat, but the "Blood Thirsty" Snuggs remained in the battle still firing his revolver and shouting curses at the fce until he was run over by a Webbland tank.

Duke Scribbles For The Birds

As if anyone really cared, it was announced Wednesday that Grand Duke Charles II has been under consideration for the Pulitzer Prize for literature with his book of poetry A Sparrow Falls Sweetly in Yon Field. The book, which was published through the government printing office, is considered a colossal success. According to reliable sources, over a million copies have been printed and at least some have been sold.

The announcement was made by Charles Lefler who knew it by heart.

Is Confused

Rand-McNally reported earlier today that it is having trouble finding the Duchy of Grand Ru-dolfendorff and the Webbland Republic. The statement was made by Vickie Alexander, a represen-tative of the company, in a meet-ing of the company's board of
