

Cherry bombs away! Here come the hoods in egg-covered hot rods with twice the firepower of a battleship. Everything from booby traps to M-80's & nitro complement the supply of explosives. We have a new strategy this year. Blow craters in the streets with homemade plastic explosives to make mantraps. Contact-drying cement fills the bottom. Preparations took place for months in advance of the last of October. Six-inch armor plating, solid rubber tires, and two-inch thick windows provide protection on the hot rods with two hemi's to pull each one. Most dangerous are the light-armored, commando-manned Volkswagens, with a hefty supply of explosives. Percussion explosives can now be found in the center of halloween candy. Crunch-KABOOOOO!!!! When all of the sophomores come around trick-or-treating, they will really get theirs. During the last week in October, egg sales, (loaded and plain) were up tremendously. While sophomores tremble in their boots, the Seniors stockpile weaponry.

SPECIAL! Black market fireworks from C. F. & F. Finklestein Importers, Ltd. Also, protection on October 31 by C. F. & F. Finklestein Protection Agency, Ltd can be arranged. You have the choice of being protected or unprotected. We strongly recommend the former.

YOU TOO, SOPHOMORES! We hate you too. Especially when you cut the Seniors. My knife is sharper than yours. Here, from C. F. & F. Finklestein Publishers, Ltd. is the revised version of your literary efforts:

The Ode to a Sophomore
A sophomore is a mesophyte;
It lives within its skin so tight.
It would not effect us at all,
It doesn't make a move or call.

Yet if one bites its skin so lightly
Then on their breath an odor
blightly

That it drives away everyone
So let's eat sophomores by the ton.

Well, enough about the insane
ones in this school.

Mad Voyage

Welcome aboard, so you do not see me. Do not fear, I am present, and I am not.

This is a ship of no ports, passengers, crew or survivors. We sail on a sea of voidness in a ship of nothing. We shall never dock, nor shall we need to do so, for we have no need of fuel or even of an engine, yet we sail.

Bookings? None. Each is his own payment to sail, and we all pay deeply for it. Yet you board us steadily, willingly, and unceasingly.

Oh, there is no return to the shore of sanity now; we are all lost. So welcome aboard forever.

"... And they lived happily ever after!"

Will Our Antenna Work?

Perhaps you saw him this past summer as technical director of "Oklahoma". When opening night arrived, he had practiced his talent to perfection. During the entire performance, he swung from the stage lights by his toes and thus evolved his name . . . Mr. Aerial. This "daring young man" from Pfeiffer College will teach Mrs. Gamewell's schedule in the English department for eight weeks.

To his single sophomore class, Mr. Aerial will teach appreciation of poetry and the short story; to seniors, twentieth century literature. In addition, he will advise the Full Moon staff and supervise a drama workshop.

The drama workshop will be active each day after school. Studdents will learn methods of acting with special emphasis on "toe-swinging." Goals of the session will be to determine exactly what the duties of an actor are in communicating with his audience, and to present several productions to the public.

Upon receiving his teacher's certificate, Mr. Aerial plans to teach English and eventually return to graduate school for a more thorough study of drama.
