

SCHOOL LAUNCHES FIRST ANNUAL CANDY SALE

During a recent Student Council meeting, a bar of the World's Finest Chocolate appeared. But where is it now?

Fund Raising Project To Benefit All Organizations

All students of ASHS will participate in a candy-selling project beginning February 27 and lasting about two weeks. World's Finest Chocolate Bars will be sold for fifty cents each in order to make money for school clubs.

Bob Eadie, salesman for the company, will present an assembly program, February 27, to explain the campaign to the students.

Mr. Hawkins, after receiving many requests from club sponsors, concluded that the school clubs did not have enough money to function as organizations.

After approaching the City School Board with a tentative budget, he received permission for the school to conduct one fund-raising project each year.

Money will be used for school activities and will be proportioned out according to need.

Every student will receive at least one box of candy. A cash prize will be given to the top salesman, and the homeroom selling the most candy will receive a secret special privilege.

Leading this school-wide endeavor, the Student Council will receive five cents from each bar of candy sold since it operates for the entire school.

Miss Holshouser commented, "They'd better sell it," while Mr. Hawkins concluded the idea by saying, "It's for a good cause because we need it!"

Foreign Policy Outlined At Convocation

"Foreign policy is about you, in the most personal and intimate sense . . .", stated Secretary of State Dean Rusk according to the United States Ambassador Olcott H. Deming, in a convocation held in the Mitchell Gymnasium, Pfeiffer College, Thursday, January 26.

Forty-five ASHS seniors, accompanied by Mr. Bill Merritt, American Problems instructor, heard the diplomat-in-residence at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Mr. Deming outlined man's relationship to man and the current state of the United States in foreign policy. He pointed out that our foreign dealings are not far away and someone else's business; "it is coming home to us where we live."

The noted Ambassador stated that it is not generosity alone, a love of involvement in other's affairs, or an economic imperialism which leads us to provide assistance to develop countries across the world, but our interest to enable free nations to remain free. To fight for political freedom is an inherited moral and political state of a country.

Presently serving as visiting Professor of Political Science at UNC, Ambassador Deming has held diplomatic posts in Bangkok, Tokyo, Okinawa, and at the United Nations since joining the State Department in 1943. In 1962 he was appointed as the United States' first ambassador to Uganda.

Rotarian, respectively, for the month of January.

ITED

All juniors took the Iowa Test of Educational Development January 16 and 17. These achievement tests will be machine scored and results computed on a national norm. The ITED enables the school to evaluate its teaching in each of the nine included areas.

Coach Raises Cain

Intramurals are no longer a "wish we had" at ASHS, for this year, we've got 'em. Coach Cain seems to have found a use for the frequently wasted periods disguised under the name of study halls.

Under the new intramural program, boys get a chance to play basketball each Wednesday with their study hall teams. After several weeks of playing, these study hall teams will go into competition, followed by the selection of an All-Star squad which will get an opportunity to play the men's championship faculty team.

This intramural program is open to all boys except the members of the Bulldog Varsity squad.

Students Attend Youth Breakfasts

Numerous Senior High students attended a week of City-wide Youth Breakfasts sponsored by downtown churches January 23-27. The breakfasts were served in the Fellowship Hall of First Presbyterian Church.

Speakers were scheduled throughout the week. Wade Smith, native of Albemarle, who is presently a lawyer in Raleigh, spoke to the students on Monday. Tuesday the guest speaker was Dr. Russell T. Montfort, a Winston-Salem pastor, who has appeared on many college campuses. Nannette Minor, "Miss North Carolina 1967", spoke to the students Wednesday, and Dr. John F. Anderson, Executive Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Church Extension, spoke Thursday.

The final guest speaker of the week was Bobby Lane, a senior Psychology major and basketball player at Davidson College.

Each of the speakers invited discussion during and after the assembly.

Central Methodist, First Presbyterian, First Baptist, First Lutheran, and Christ Episcopal Churches sponsored the breakfasts in the interest of the youth of Albemarle.

Editor To Attend Convocation Confab

Linda Long, editor of The Full Moon will attend the Jefferson Standard High School Award Convocation press conference, February 18, at which Roger Stevens, Chairman of The National Council on the Arts, will speak.

Newspaper editors from Mecklenburg and surrounding counties who attend the press conference and convocation will also attend a luncheon for Mr. Stevens which will be conducted at Ovens Auditorium.

Participants in the press conference will be greeted by Marie Lewis, editor of The Rambler, of Charlotte's Garinger High School, at Ovens Auditorium.

The press conference, which begins at 10:30, will enable each representative to ask Mr. Stevens two questions. The conference concludes at 11 a.m., when his speech begins.

Mr. Stevens is Chairman of the National Endowment for the Arts, and Chairman of the Board of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

A 20-student committee from the five sponsoring churches helped in organizing the week-long activity and selling the advance tickets.

Bus transportation was provided from the Fellowship Hall to school for those students having no rides.

Six To Play In State Band

Six ASHS band students have been selected to play in the All-State Band. Betty Trexler, Anne Ayers, Gerrie Watson, and Gail Fisher will perform in the symphonic band; Jo Talbert and Douglas Freeman will be in the concert band.

The above students were among the 400 who auditioned at St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Laurinburg, N. C. Thirty high schools were represented from seven counties. The 112 that were chosen were selected on the basis of their knowledge of major scales, sight reading, and general music ability. The judges for the auditions were the band directors of the South Eastern District.

In preparation for the concert, the All-State Band Clinic will be February 24-25, Union Pines High School near Southern Pines. The six selected from ASHS will participate in the clinic and in the concert on February 25.

Nicholds To Participate In International 'Experiment'

Jane Nicholds has been notified of her acceptance for the Experiment in International Living.

The Experiment is a non-profit, educational exchange program which works out of Putney, Vermont.

Each year it sponsors college, pre-college, and special interest group visits to approximately forty-five different countries throughout the world.

As a member of the Experiment, Jane will go to Vermont June 15 for a two-week period of intensive language study in Italian. Immediately following the language study, she will leave for Italy.

Jane will be placed in a group of ten students her own age under the supervision of an adult group leader. The members of the group will go to the same town in Italy where each will be placed in a different home.

During the month-long homestay, the members of their group and their host families will occasionally visit points of local interest: historic sites, educational institutions, and industrial firms; they will also attend social functions.

After the homestay, the members of the group have the opportunity to repay the generous hospitality of their hosts by having a member of each family be their guest on an informal tour of Italy, lasting from two to three weeks. This tour will include visiting large cities such as Rome, Venice, Florence, and Naples, in addition to other places of interest.

Before leaving Italy, Jane and the other members of her group will return "home" for a final week or two with their Italian families.

Although Jane does not yet know to which section of Italy she will go, she hopes to soon receive this information along with the names and addresses of her group and of her host family.

Jane Nicholds studies various aspects of Italian life.
