

Aunt Jo's Verdict

Dear Aunt Jo,

I have been married for the past twenty years to a man who is the best husband a woman ever had, except for the one fact that in all our weeks of courtship and years of marriage, he has never kissed me once. I was raised in an atmosphere of love and kisses and am starved for the affection of my husband. As we have no children I have seriously been considering a divorce. What do you think I should do?

Lovelorn

Lovelorn,

I feel that this, to some extent, is your own fault. How were you sure of his love before you were married if he never kissed you. Although since your marriage has gone this far, and you have found him a faithful husband. I advise you not to get a divorce. Maybe you have Halitosis..... Why not try Listerine?

Aunt Jo

Dear Aunt Jo,

I have lived in a small town for the past 10 years. When I came here I liked a girl in my class. When we entered high school we began having dates, so became very fond of each other. Two months ago a new boy came to our class, and she immediately left me for him. I still love her so what must I do?

Donald

Donald:

If you still love the girl hang on to her but force your affection on another girl and this will make her jealous perhaps after she gets to know the new boy she won't like him as well as you. Here's wishing you luck.

Aunt Jo

Dear Aunt Jo,

I am a senior in High School, and my parents refuse to let me have dates. What can I do? All of my girl friends have dates at least once or twice a week.

Patty

Dear Patty,

Perhaps you do not act your age. I suppose your parents realize you are grown up. This could be based on many reasons. But I find the biggest one is that girls fuss and fume around as though they were a very small child. So come on chin up! And be a grown up lady!
