Congratulations

Congratulations to Nancy Helen Bruton and John Carter Ingram for winning the Jordan-Matthews award for being the best sports during this game. The award was a blue ribbon and a card with this inscription: "The best sport during the Jordan-Matthews game."

This award is given to four people at every home conference game by the Jordan Matthews School. Two girls and two boys are picked to receive the ribbon. The opposing vote for a boy and girl from each team to receive these sportsmanship ribbons.

EDITORIAL

IS SEEPAGE OF KNOWLEDGE YOUR TROUBLE?

By the time this edition of The Smoke Signal reaches the hands of you dear beloved students (and teachers of course) the exams will be over. All will, we hope, be well and the serenity of the school will be broken only by the removal of the dead bodies who expired as a result of strained brain cells.

Let's consider what could have caused these damaged brains. Maybe it was--overwork? Knowing the students of today (and being one) I hardly think so. More than likely it was, in common terms, underwork. Our scientific definition of this happenstance will be "seepage of knowledge," for that is most probably what happened to the majority of the material taught throughout the first semester.

Let us examine more closely the term "seepage of knowledge." As each day passed the "diligent" studying of the most students paid off with day by day dividends. But whoever expected to remember the tripe for 18 weeks! Thusly we derive the term "seepage of knowledge" originating from the fact that what knowledge was crammed into the pretty little heads of West Montgomery students seeped within a matter of days into parts unknown. The student who found himself in this embarrassing position (and most of us did) was confronted with a veritable mountain of work ahead of him. To do the necessary work in preparing for exams in the allotted amount of time was impossible and the "strained brain" resulted.

As with most things, the term "seepage" does not refer directly to every student in West Montgomery nor does it necessarily include the majority. Quite the contrary; Many students needed only momentary examination of material at hand to provide them with a first class exam grade. If you happened to be one of those who barely fell outside of this group, don't take it to heart. Just remember it and work harder next semester. Keep the term "seepage of knowledge" in mind and try to retain some of the information gained during the second semester.
