AIRE YOU GUILTY?

Why is it that some people must cheat to make good grades at school? Don't they realize they are only hurting themselves? They are cheating themselves out of an almost free niga school education. And after high school, what? Will they go to college and cheat there, too? It won't be so easy to do there. For the ones who don't go to college -- will they find jobs, and cheat in the work they do? And what about their consciences? Are these students not bothered by conscience, or has cheating become a routine matter?

I realize that everyone in his lifetime cheats at least once. We're only human but I am referring to the people who cheat continually, and get away with it. It does not seem fair for one person to study and make a fair grade on a test, and for another person who hasn't stud-

Teachers need to keep a close watch for cheating during test time, but the students also have a grave responsibility for the development of their own character. If it is wrong to cheat, could it not also be wrong to allow the offender to go unpunished? Are we not personally giving a nod of approval to the cheating when we, as students, refuse aid in his discovery and apprehension?

AGGRESSIVE ATTITUDES

It seems that many students have developed, or should we more appropriately say, cultivated an aggressive attitude toward school in general. This belligerent or pugnacious spirit is based upon the completely erroneous assumption that students have the right to do as they please with no questions asked. They don't! Teachers are in control of the student body and have supreme authority, even over the highest student government official. The students who think they are under no obligations except to the teacher whose class they are attending -- and then only partially -- have a hard lesson to learn? West Montgomery cannot function at its best until students learn this.

Montgomery County garage, suggests "the location is ideal. From what I can tell, it is a fine school. There are, of course, some defects in construction, but these can and will be fixed!"

A member of the gym floor replacement crew offers his opinion, "It is a good school, except for this floor. This defect does not come from an error in construction. Someone just tried to go a nearer way with the pipe."

From these meager statements, this con-
