

Propose Removal Meredith to Site Near Wake Forest

A definite proposition for the removal of Meredith College from Raleigh, the abandonment of the proposed site near Method and the selection of a site at Forestville, is being made by people of Wake Forest, including townspeople and members of the faculty of Wake Forest College.

The proposal which would mean the establishment of the Baptist woman's college of the State within a mile of the Baptist men's college in the State is submitted in an article in the Biblical Recorder written by Dr. G. W. Paschal, of the Wake Forest faculty.

A movement is afoot at Wake Forest, it is understood by which sufficient funds would be raised to purchase grounds for the establishment of Meredith at Forestville.

Dr. Paschal's article in the Biblical Recorder follows:

"The people of the town of Wake Forest and vicinity have a definite proposition to make to the trustees of Meredith College and the Baptists of the State.

"We offer a site for Meredith College, and offer it free of charge.

"We have several desirable sites, but I shall mention the advantages of only one. And I shall do this for the most part, in paragraphs of one sentence each, leaving the development of the points to my readers.

"1. The site is on the hard-surface road in process of construction from Raleigh, northward, about half a mile from Forestville and three-fourths of a mile from Wake Forest.

"2. It is a plateau, commanding a view of a beautiful country for miles around on all sides.

"3. It is as large as needed, 150 acres if desired, stretching along the highway for more than a quarter of a mile, reaching the Seaboard Air Line Railway on one side and the Wake Forest College golf links on the other.

"4. It is well drained and sanitary, and in easy reach of water and lighting system of the town of Wake Forest.

"5. Adjoining the railroad, it offers room for a spur to unload coal and heavy freight, such as is needed in building.

"6. It is in a district pre-empted a century ago for Baptist education, and therefore altogether free from objectionable populations and institutions.

"7. On the new highway it will be in easy reach of Raleigh, not more than a thirty-minute run, and practically as near the city as the site at Method.

"8. Being a free gift of the people of Wake Forest, it will save the purchase price of the Method site, some fifty or sixty thousand dollars.

"9. This site offers a good compromise for both those who have avored and those who have opposed the site near Method. It will please and get everybody in a good humor.

"10. With Meredith on this site, the educational interests and program for our young men and our young women could be properly unified and co-ordinated. This can never be done, even if found desirable, with Wake Forest on one side of Raleigh and Meredith on the other.

"11. In a social way, Wake Forest and Meredith would both be greatly benefited by being near one another. Consider the great advantage to the students of State College that Meredith would be if located at Method. A like advantage would come to the Wake Forest students if Meredith should be located near Wake Forest. And their own students are, or should be, proper care of North Carolina Baptists.

"12. Then, again, these institutions, if near one another, would greatly profit from the fact that their students would have a common spirit, be interested in the welfare of the two institutions alike, and unite our people throughout the State in a common enthusiasm for both.

"13. Leaving out many advantages that each institution might gain from the faculty, library, and common lecture courses of the other. I mention only the fact that if situated near one another the students of each college could enjoy much better religious advantages for training and service than if separate.

"14. And this is no untried experiment. Thirty-one years ago, as editor of the Wake Forest Student, I advocated the plan here suggested. At the time, President Taylor was understood to favor it. Since then it has been adopted, with slight modification, by the Baptists of Virginia. Twenty years ago Richmond College was little short of a disgrace to the Virginia Baptists and the city of Richmond. Westhampton, the college for women, was not much better. But today they have been moved to new sites near one another, not as accessible to the business part of Richmond as Wake Forest is to Raleigh, and the two have become the pride of our Virginia brethren and have their enthusiastic support. Their endowment and property have grown by leaps and bounds, and today they exceed in value that of any other two Baptist institutions in the South. Would it not be well for us to consider the result of co-ordinating the Virginia colleges in our further plans for our own?"

Elon College, N. C., October 17, 1922
—Dr. Martyn Summerbell, of Lakemont, N. Y., delivered his annual series of lectures to the student body, October 15-17. The general theme of his lectures for this year was the discussion of Modern Apostles. The men whom he characterized as such, were John Wycliffe, John Huss and John Calvin. His lectures are always of interest to the student body, and his coming is always looked forward to as one of the greatest events of the college year.

Elon College, N. C., October 17, 1922
—On Saturday evening, October 14, the Music Lovers' Club of Elon College, presented to the college and the community, Miss Marie Tiffany, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera Company. Her concert was one of the best that has ever been given in the college auditorium. The program was made up of members that were varied and every selection was greatly enjoyed by the audience.

THE CHIVALRY OF EVERYDAY TASKS

Saturday morning, October 21, 1922, a very interesting lecture was given to the students of Meredith College, by the bursar, Mr. Ferrell. The theme of the talk was courage. In defining courage he certainly expressed the sentiment of the greater part of the girls when he said that it took more courage to get up in the morning than it did to fight a battle. To get up in the morning, knowing that the same old routine is to be travelled, certainly offers no great outlook for the day; therefore it does take courage to make the best of every day.

And then, having courage to practice and prepare recitations is another necessity for the person who means to be a real success in life. Success never comes to the person who merely wishes but to the one who wishes and works. Excellence in any art can never be attained without practice and study which takes a great amount of courage plus ambition.

So often people do not consider that anyone else has as great difficulties as theirs. Students do not often consider the teachers' problems and difficulties. Theirs are truly as great and amazing as those of any of us. Do they not have to possess a wonderful amount of courage to do the same thing every day, to meet the same people every day and yet get pleasure out of their work? Surely courage plays a wonderful part in keeping them at it.

Does it take more courage for the average individual or for the man of fame? Of course, there is a difference in opinion to this question, but there is one thing that is evident to all of us and that is that the average man's career consists of little everyday things that the best must be made of, while the famous man knows his praises are sung and that everybody knows of his accomplishments.

There are a few people in the world who try to make other people think they are that which they are not—camouflage? Yes, but this has been proved never to benefit anyone not even the individual who is trying to bluff. It does not take courage to camouflage. The beginning of success must necessarily be in you, and if the ambition is strong enough the results will be success and your acquaintance will know of your success without any special bluff on your side. Never allow anyone to think you are something when you know full well you are not.

PERFECTLY OUTRAGEOUS

When Eve brought woe to all mankind, Old Adam called her wo-man. But when she woo'd with love so kind, He then pronounced it woo-man. But now with folly and with pride, Their husbands' pockets brimming, The ladies are so full of whims That people call them whim-men.

TWO WAYS

To every girl there openeth,
A Way and Ways and a Way:
And the High Soul climbs the High Way
And the Low Soul gropes the Low.
And in between on the misty flats
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every girl there openeth,
A High Way and a Low,
And every girl decideth
The way her soul shall go.
