

SENIORS ENTERTAINED BY MISS IDA POTEAT

ART STUDIO UNPARALLELED SCENE OF GREENWICH VILLAGE PARTY

"Greenwich Village" was the scene of much merry-making on Monday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, when the Seniors paid their first visit to the Village under the leadership of Miss Ida Poteat. At the "Sign of the Purple Pup," was their first stop, where the guests were shown examples of ultra-modern art, especially of cubists, futurists, tactilists, soul expressionists, dadaists, vitalists and freakists. From this "Art Mecca" they were directed to various attractive Inns, among which "The Rabbit Hole," "The Mad Hatter," "Blue Horse," "The Puppy Cat," were most familiar. Here tea and cakes were served, and the guests were allowed the privilege of displaying their talent for interpretative art. An unusual amount of fun was gained from these masterpieces. Sonia, the belle of the Village, next offered for sale odd wares and trinkets, the price of which was an emotion. Each one of the Seniors eagerly waited her opportunity to buy, and none were disappointed. Throughout the entire Village originality was developed to the superlative degree and the guests were not slow to recognize this fact. After thanks had been expressed in a peppy manner, highly satisfactory in the Village, the guests departed, mentally declaring that Miss Ida had given them a most charming and delightful picture of that renowned quarter.

OR THIS?

The old adage that "everything has a place of its own, and in its place should be" is well enough known and understood, but all too infrequently is this truth applied to the practical routine of our school life. School dresses are school dresses and dinner is dinner, and so will each remain true to itself, and to each other, throughout all ages! The incongruity of the situation, therefore, is evident when a girl appears in the dining room at night clad in the, necessarily, rumpled gingham dress which she has worn all day to classes and elsewhere. Not that gingham dresses are to be scorned—not that at all—but they, at least, must be fresh looking, and, if possible, different from the previous attire of the day. Of course, girls in the swiftly moving College Circle, are frequently "busy," indeed, but to present such an excuse for a careless appearance at meals, especially at the one in the evening, is nothing but sheer nonsense. Ten minutes would complete the transformation, and often less, if one is not too slow. After all, it's but a matter of habit and a wee bit of thought, but when such minor details are to convey such important impressions, they're worthy of more than passing consideration on our part.

Phi's to Present "The Charm School" essays, through technical strategy of a different and unusual sort, the conversion of fifty most youthful, vivacious and happy-go-lucky "inmates" of a typical strait-jacket boarding school into more charming, feminine and versatile products of "The Charm School."

Of course he meets opposition in the form of perplexing problems which naturally present themselves to so young and handsome a sovereign so evidently out of his element, but with remarkable ingenuity he proves master of himself and forthwith properly loses his heart, in a continuous moment of masculine weakness, and gracefully succumbs to the endearing charms of the most charming of the charming members of the School of Charm.

Frankly, "The Charm School," which is being presented by the Philaretian Society on April 28th, is an education within itself. You can't afford to run the extreme risk of overlooking one element of the process so strikingly illustrated in this unusually charming little play.

as possible for succeeding years. The last two conventions have followed this plan; the 1922 conference being held in New Orleans, La., at Newcomb College and this in Richmond, Va., at Westhampton.

The delegates from Meredith are Louise Mays, present student body president, and Martha Powell, who was recently unanimously elected president for 1923-'24.

ning with the well-known tenor Aria, "Where'er You Walk." Other groups included numbers in English, Italian, and German, which were done with careful attention to technique.

While the singer's upper register is somewhat inclined to be tricky, his lower tones are good and handled intelligently. Mrs. Wilhelmina Crowell of the Meredith faculty accompanied him in her usual artistic manner.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

ALICE KLUTTZ MADE PRESIDENT AS SUCCESSOR TO MIRIAM RUFFIN

The Home Economics Club held a short business meeting for the election of officers on Tuesday afternoon at 4:45.

The following officers were elected: Alice Kluttz, president; Gertrude Bowen, vice-president; Margaret Herring, secretary-treasurer; Iona Daniels, reporter.

After the appointment of a membership committee the club adjourned to meet the second Tuesday in May.

STAY-IN-SCHOOL IDEA PROMOTED BY B. H. S.

FIVE BURLINGTON HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS PLAN TO ENTER MEREDITH NEXT FALL

Notable among the many activities in which Meredith manifests a vital interest, and we hope evidences equally as great an influence, is the broad field of expansion offering opportunity for stimulating enthusiasm among high school students to remain in high school until graduation is effected and follow up such an excellent lead with immediate attendance at some institution of higher learning.

Favorable impression in regard to work of this sort was made at a "Stay-in-School" program, arranged by the Burlington High School and rendered at Burlington on April 13, at which affair Meredith was represented by Barre Pritchett.

The order of procedure was unusual as well as appealing in its originality, short talks by representatives from several colleges of the State being interspersed with appropriate and peppy songs complimentary to the respective speakers, and interesting numbers presented by Burlington High students.

Of course girls at high school in Burlington who are fully contemplating attendance at Meredith command our especial interest and it is gratifying to learn that five Seniors, now registered at this high school, have applied for entrance at Meredith for the Fall of 1923.

Colleges represented at this event included Meredith, North Carolina College, Greensboro College, Elon, Trinity, Salem, Guilford and East Carolina Teachers Training School, and it is with assurance of their support that we voice congratulations to Burlington High School for intense enthusiasm, and express appreciation of cordial hospitality afforded her guests.

DEBATERS PRESENTED IN SOCIETY PROGRAM

LIVELY INTEREST IN ASTRO HALL AS QUESTION IS HOTLY ARGUED

Debating made its initial appearance of the year in the Astro Society on Saturday evening, April 14, in the query, "Resolved, That a Policy of Further Material Restriction of Immigration be Adopted by the United States." The affirmative side was ably upheld by Elsie Elkins and Martha Livermon and the negative rose to eloquence through the efforts of Elizabeth Purnell and Alberta Butler. Both sides presented excellent material in good form yet the judges unanimously favored the negative. It is a source of much pleasure to many lovers of true literary merit to see the members take such active interest in this type of literary expression. We are proud to once more welcome back to our halls the debate as an extra curricular activity and hope that it will see fit to remain long with us.
