After the serving of delicious refreshments consisting of Angel Food cake with whip cream, and mints, the guests said good-night. Every one went away feeling that there is a closer bond of friendship between the two colleges.

The guests were: Messrs. W. C. Orders, A. R. Marley, B. A. Presslar, L. E. Hows, H. E. Springer, F. M. Chedester, W. N. Hicks, J. C. Davis, C. L. Stranglean, H. K. Plott, Joe Moore; also Miss Florence Hoagland and Miss Caroline Biggers quarter the Seniors seemed to be "sitting on top of the world" with 22 points to their credit, while the Sophs—well, we just won't say. But we will say things looked almost hopeless.

SENIORS, SOPHOMORES

STRUGGLE FOR VICTORY

The last call was sounded. It was "now or never." Just after the play was started Boney was called out and Atkinson took her place. But all hail to the little forward Cobb! She said, "They shall not win," and did her best toward evening up the score. About that time Sawyer was called out and Woods took her place. There were only a few moments left. Excitement was running sky high. In about the last two minutes of the play Cobb evened the score with a free shot and then Scarborough rang the death knell! The whistle sounded and you know the rest! Joy was everywhere!

As for stars, there were many in the sky that night, but there were so many on the court that it's hard to name any one. Cobb and Sawyer led the shooting contest, while Brewer did some fine work and Scarborough came through at the crucial moment. Boney, Harris, and Bane played a wonderful defensive game. Waters was there fighting for her team, too; nor can we overlook Arnette, Herring, Ayscue, and Daughtry. Oh well, they all played good basketball so why elaborate?

Perhaps next game spirit will reach an even higher mark. If that's the case, we'll be forced to have a whistle attached to the boiler room for the referee's benefit. But we don't mind a small thing like that. We are looking forward to next time. The tables may turn but it had been remarked that the Sophs "didn't have a chance." Well, the last game will kill that idea. Perhaps both teams can't win, but the best team will win! To the Seniors I say, "You played a great game—luck to you!" To the Sophs I say, "We're for you."

"Roses are red
Violets are blue
Sugar is sweet
And nice in coffee."

SERIES OF LECTURES

GIVEN AT MEREDITH

was illustrated gave a very clear conception of the Acropolis as it now exists. Through his sympathetic and scholarly interpretation Dr. Powers in his second lecture upon Michael Angelo and the Sistine Chapel made art students and others see the great artist actually at work, as it were.

Dr. Powers is the author of one of the best works ever published upon Michael Angelo and his art, and probably there is today no art critic who can better interpret to others the message of the great sculptor, painter, and architect as set forth in his extant works.

For a chapel talk Dr. Powers spoke upon the present international situation. Here again he showed himself a careful and accurate observer of the part the leading statesmen of the different nations are playing. His summary of events in Italy and his remarks upon Mussolini were most enlightening.

He believes that Briand of France and Streeseaman of Germany are the great constructive statesmen of Europe. This talk was greatly appreciated by students and faculty.

While at Meredith Dr. and Mrs. Powers were honorary guests at a banquet given by the Honor Society of Meredith College, and enjoyed very much this meeting with our students.

Dr. Powers left Raleigh for New York, from which port he sailed February 23 with a party for Greece, Italy, and other Mediterranean points.

PHI SOCIETY TO STUDY MODERN LITERATURE

certainly the hour last Saturday evening was filled with interesting selections which were so well presented that it was evident that the plan will result in enjoyable and instructive programs.

This particular program, the second in the series, was based on modern poetry, and was as follows:

Survey of Modern Poets and Their Work .....Carolyn Peacock
Solo .....Evelyn Rhea Wood
John Mansfield as a Poet

By Alberta Harris

Vesper, a poem by A. A. Milne

Ruth Brookshire

The Poets of the Young People

Laura Weatherspoon

Phi song.

Later the society intends to make a survey of some modern art and music. Through such programs one learns to appreciate the literature more, and since few of the girls have an opportunity of making an intensive study of such, this should be a means of creating interest in worthwhile modern literature.

CLASS OF '30 GIVEN

VALENTINE PARTY

waitresses in white, with tiny valentines all over their costumes, appeared with most delightful refreshments, consisting of block ice cream with red hearts frozen within, delicious cake, nuts, little red cups with candy hearts, and a cup of punch. While the refreshments were being enjoyed, every one suddenly became quiet. Dorothy Turlington, in her sweet, appealing manner was singing! As she finished, in came three doll-like characters: Mildred Allen, representing the Queen of Hearts; Mary Willis, the King of Hearts, and Ellen Broadwell, the Knave. An interesting little pageant was given in which the King, Queen, and Knave were the leading characters. At the conclusion of this stunt, yells and more yells were given by '28 and '30 and all scampered off to their rooms, heartily agreeing that "a good time had been enjoyed by all."

Storekeeper: We don't handle gold-fish.

Nice Old Lady: Well, I hope you don't; it's not good for them.
