LOYAL MEETING OF MEREDITH ALUMNAE OF ROANOKE ASSOCIATION

Scotland Neck, Dec. 9. The alumnae of Meredith College of the Roanoke Association enjoyed a most delightful banquet here Friday evening, Dec. 9. In spite of the unfavorable weather there were forty present, cars coming from Greenville, Nashville, and Stantonburg. Mrs. Leon Vaughn of Nashville presided in her usual charming manner and with her ready wit kept the meeting from becoming dull for a moment. After the delicious four course dinner was served she introduced the speakers of the evening.

First on the program was "Reminiscences of Meredith College," by Mrs. R. C. Josey, Sr., of Scotland Neck, who was a member of the faculty the first year the college opened. The incidents she described, apparently at random, were both amusing and sad and yet through it all one could catch a vision of the love and sacrifice that were built into the very foundations of the college in those first years.

Mrs. Josey was followed by Mrs. Justice Everett of Greenville, who spoke feelingly on "What Meredith has meant to me." Any one who does not appreciate the influence that Meredith exerts over its students should have heard Mrs. Everett. All who heard her pledged themselves anew to love and support their Alma Mater.

After this talk those from Greenville gave an amusing stunt that was enjoyed by all. This was followed by a talk on "What we can do for Meredith," by Mrs. Leslie Greene Chamblee from Nashville. Her talk was very inspiring, bringing out the point that to Meredith Alumnae would fall the responsibility of seeing this Centennial Campaign brought to a successful close. "It is easier to begin a task than to complete it," she said, "and we must see to it that the interest and enthusiasm of the Baptists do not waver."

Miss Joy Beaman then talked on the subject "Is Meredith Worthy of the Sacrifices we are Making?" She described the sacrifices made in the past by such men as O. F. Stringfield, John E. Ray, Carey Hunter and Miss Heck and today by many of our Baptist leaders, and the faculty and student body of Meredith and others and challenged her hearers to live up to the standard that they had set; for her audience needed no proof that Meredith was worthy of every effort each could make.

Mrs. Vaughn then made an earnest plea that each Meredith daughter present should go out and in every way possible try to get subscriptions for the Centennial Campaign so that by Dec. 13, Roanoke Association should have raised its quota and thereby helped to have made the future of their Alma Mater secure.

After singing some college songs the meeting adjourned.

SANTA AND THE FUTURE

MATILDA HOLLEMAN

ACT I

SCENE I

TIME 11:00 P. M.

A bedroom of a Meredith Freshman
Freshman: Gee, how good it seems to be home. I like Meredith, but not half as well as I do mother, daddy and—Bill. He was such a dear tonight and I really believe he likes me better than he used to.

Gee, how thrilling it is to think that tonight is Christmas eve. I must hurry to bed or Santa will not come.

SCENE II

Freshie fast asleep—Dreams

Santa: Come on in boys, she's well on the road to slumbers.

Little Elves Flit in

Meredith Elf: You know I've never seen a better girl in my life. She is just the kind of girl Meredith needs—but she just doesn't study hard enough.

Math Elf: Yes, only yesterday she came to class with only three problems worked, how sad.

English Elf: Yes, last week she knew very little about "The Tempest," and only yesterday she had a poor theme.

Chemistry Elf: Last but not least, poor Freshie, never finishes me so I'm left out.

French Elf: "Et Moi." She knows me but I'm so sorry, I must be too hard to pronounce, but she never gets me right.

"WHAT PRICE GLORY" SHOWING AT STATE

Do you dislike war stories? Are you tired of seeing war pictures? Are you fed up with the craze which has recently swept the country for the war touch to everything that is being written or produced? Then the picture you have been waiting for is coming to the State Theatre today and Saturday. It is "What Price Glory."

True, "What Price Glory" has a war background, but this background only enhances the delicious comedy, the emotional drama and the rapturous thrills that this masterpiece contains.

Dolores Del Rio, who portrayed the poignant Katusha in Tolstoy's "Resurrection," leaped to fame in her characterization of the seductive Charmaine for whose favor two men are constantly at swords' ends.

Victor McLaglen in the role of Captain Flagg gives a superb performance, as does Edmund Lowe in the part of Sergeant Quirt.

Laurence Stallings, author of "Plumes" and Maxwell Anderson, the noted editorial writer, are the authors of "What Price Glory."

Latin Elf: Poor child, she knows nothing but "Ego amo te" about me and I suppose everybody knew that before she started to school.

Basket Ball: But really, I feel big over myself, she really puts a lot of her time on me.

Freshie Turns Over

Santa: Well, well, I just don't know what to do with this poor child.

Elves: We don't either.

Santa: (Thinks.) Oh, I have it! I have the very thing right here in my pack.

SCENE III

Freshie Dreams On

Freshie: Oh, ho! Well I guess it's what you would call Christmas morning. Just to think no Math, Chemistry, English, French, or Latin to get. Well, now to see what Santa brought. (Looks.) What are all these books, boxes, and bottles for?

Oh, look, on a Latin book is a bottle labeled: "How to Study Livy."

On an English book is a box saying: "Outlines to Themes."

And here is an old French book with this on it: "Comment Prononcer en francais."

Then a Chemistry book saying: "Complete Experiments Illustrated."

And look, dear old Santa has left a Math book too. But what is this? What a tiny Basket Ball and a note saying: "Work and then play with me."

Curtain

We have seen three "Santa Clauses" downtown; not understanding this we are going to investigate the matter. We wonder if three will come to see us on Christmas Eve?
