Mr. Battin Presents Recital In Auditorium

Lovers of Bach's music were given a thrill in the true sense of the word Sunday afternoon from 5:30-6:30 o'clock, in the Meredith College auditorium, when Prof. Isaac L. Battin rendered a most inspiring and brilliant organ recital, using at this time only selections from that genius Bach. This was the fifth recital that has been given this year by the Meredith Music Department faculty. All recitals have been broadcast over Station WPTF and well received by the radio fans.

Mr. Battin's interpretation of Bach's numbers was most successful, and he displayed great skill and depth of feeling in each number, but especially in the chorales.

The program opened with Prelude and Fugue in A minor, the theme of which was brought out with extraordinary ability. The chorales were particularly beautiful, being played with depth of feeling. The program was brought to a close with Toccata and Fugue in D minor, which was played with great brilliancy.

The program was as follows:
Prelude and Fugue in A Minor.....Bach

Miss McNaughton Talks In Parlor Saturday Nite

Miss McNaughton, originally from Scotland, and now superintendent of the school at Samarcand, spoke at vespers Sunday evening. In introducing Miss McNaughton, Dr. Carroll, chairman of the board of directors for Samarcand Manor, gave the history of the founding of the school for delinquent girls and voiced the appreciation which the women of North Carolina felt at having secured the services of Miss McNaughton as the superintendent of such a school. In the address which followed the speaker described the school, scheduled one of their usual days, explained her work by giving the life history of some of the students there, and showed what lasting effect the instruction given at Samarcand had on the girls who are sent there. She expressed a feeling of gratitude for what Meredith students had done each year at Christmas to help make the season a more joyous one for the girls at Samarcand. Miss McNaughton also brought greetings and appreciation to Meredith from her girls, and said that they were awaiting, with keen interest, the approach of the 1929 Christmas season.

!!!CHRISTMAS!!!

Perhaps one doesn't need to be reminded that Christmas is coming. In fact, the perhaps should be entirely done away with, for it is evident that Meredith is fully aware that the holidays approach. Calendars are filled with dates criss-crossed as days now past. Bulky packages are even now to be seen in the arms of Meredith's "lovely shoppers." Lessons go on—but, Christmas IS coming!

THANKSGIVING SERVICE HELD IN BLUE PARLORS

Miss Annie Bostick Tells Of Experiences In China

Thanksgiving Day at Meredith opened with a beautiful devotional service held at 9 o'clock in the parlors. Miss Atlie Bostick, a missionary to China, brought a deeply inspirational message to the large group of faculty members and students there.

The service was begun by the singing of the Doxology, after which Vida Miller led in prayer. After the singing of "Come, Ye Thankful People, Come," Marguarite Mason, who presided over the service, led in a responsive reading from the Scriptures, followed by prayer. A vocal solo by Alma Dark, "O For a Thousand Tongues To Sing," aided in creating a devotional atmosphere preceding Miss Bostick's talk. Dr. Brewer introduced Miss Bostick, the sister of Mr. Wade Bostick, another well-known missionary in China. Miss Bostick, after finishing at Judson College, went out on the mission field in 1900, during the dreadful Boxer rebellion, to give her life to the cause of Christ, to which her family has nobly contributed. There she has spent most of her time in northern China, engaged in work among the women and children.

Miss Bostick's talk, compellingly interesting throughout, consisted of a series of incidents taken from her experiences as a missionary, from which she drew the conclusions that painted for her listeners the many hardships and trials of the Chinese girl's life so vividly that when the life of the Meredith girl, of any American girl, was placed in contrast, the heart of each could not help being filled with gratitude for the blessings of her life in this Christian land, a true Thanksgiving spirit, and a desire to help extend these blessings to the girls across the sea who are just learning to know Christ through the noble efforts of such tireless workers as Miss Atlie Bostick.

New Handbook Is Issued By State

The State Department of Education has just released a new high school handbook and manual, including the Reorganization Program, which bears the names of Prof. J. L. Memory, Jr., and Dr. J. Henry Highsmith as co-authors. This publication is the official guide for the 4,000 high school principals and teachers of the State.

The Reorganization Program consists of a series of tables, suggesting and prescribing curricula for schools ranging from a teaching faculty of three teachers to six or more. Not only are the subjects suggested, but a schedule is worked out for the teachers in each of the various size schools.
