

Freshman Thoughts on Meredith

There are various and sundry opinions among the freshmen regarding different phases of college life. The rising bell seems to be generally unpopular for some mysterious reason. Some girls complain about it's forlorn sound. Several freshmen have been considering starting a petition for cheaper rates to and from town because when they have paid the bus fare they have nothing left to spend. The numerous fees and extras continually keep a freshman's purse flat. The idea of unpacking their trunks in the attic and lugging their clothes all the way down stairs does not appeal to many freshman either.

As to the freshman's idea about study. A typical freshman said that she couldn't concentrate because all the time she felt she needed to be recreating and she couldn't recreate because she felt she ought to be concentrating.

But in spite of the petty worries and tribulations which the average freshman would encounter anywhere the freshman love Meredith already as a patriot loves his country. They like the ice cream on Wednesday and Sunday dinners but wish it were perpetual diet. There is something very impressive and inspiring about the chapel programs and religious activities. The friendliness of the girls is on an equality basis and there is not a better spirit anywhere than exists on the campus. The cooperation and sympathetic attitude of the faculty toward the student body and the old students toward the new is beautiful. Perhaps the general consensus of opinion might be summed up best, by Annie Mae Taylor, beloved president of the freshman class, who says that "Meredith is the next place to heaven" and the garden spot.

PALACE THEATRE

"The Last Mile" with Howard Phillips and Preston Foster.

Within their confines of sombre prison walls, what do those souls in agony and despair think? What do they say? What do they do?

The answer to that question makes the drama, and teaches an everlasting lesson in "The Last Mile" which plays at the Palace Theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Based on one of the dramatic sensations of the stage, "The Last Mile," in picture form, drives home like a mighty sledge hammer the value of the restraint of human passions.

It will tell you what they think. It will tell you in powerful terms what they say. And in tense, dramatic, moving action you will see what they do!
