CONGRATULATIONS!

"Now the time has come," not to talk of cabbages, kings, or sealing wax but to congratulate those who made Stunt Night of 1932 a wonderful success.

Congratulations Juniors! First place at Stunt Night for two consecutive years is no small honor. To the victor belongs the spoils so to you belongs the silver loving cup which has been presented to the winners of the best stunt each since 1923.

Congratulations Seniors! Neither is second place small honor. The Seniors also won second place last year.

Congratulations Athletic Association! The manner in which the entire program was arranged and presented showed careful planning on the part of that association.

Congratulations and thanks to all others who had a part in making Stunt Night of 1932 carry out the purpose for which it was planned in 1913—a stunt in which class competition could express itself in cleverness and originality.

The Meredith Trio was heard with pleasure during chapel Wednesday of last week. Meredith is fortunate in having this group on the campus. They are not only enjoyed on the campus but are asked to play for various organizations of the city and out of town. The members of the trio are Misses Charlotte Armstrong, Aileen McMillan, and Alfrieda Rosel.

It was delightful to have so many of the alumnae back for Stunt Night.

KRYPTIC KOMMENT

Sad Kommentary

"In Teaching of English class, each of the students have to teach one lesson in grammar," wrote one of the said students to a friend, and blushed to the point of blistering when the sentence was playfully quoted in reply.

Judging from that excerpt it seems that "there still remaineth much to be done."

What About Marc Connelly?

In an AP article appearing on the front page of one of our local newspapers last week was found the following enlightening statement: "Green Pastures" was written by Paul Green, University of North Carolina professor and playwright.

While it's proverbially true that "two wrongs don't make a right," it's comforting to note that the TWIG isn't the only newspaper to contain occasional error. And if this be rationalizing

Economically Encouraging

According to the article, "Green Pastures" was being enacted before the citizens of Stockholm, who objected quite violently to the show on the grounds that it was "religious buffoonery," and subsequently subjected the players to a barrage of eggs and tomatoes. It is thought that a group of National Socialists were responsible for this demonstration.

Maybe that's their way of saying they have farm produce to throw to the—actors, in lieu of the proverbial birds.

With Apologies to Gray

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day,
A line of cars winds slowly o'er the lea,
A pedestrian plods his absent-minded way
And leaves the world quite unexpectedly.

That isn't original. I found it in a recent issue of the Biblical Recorder.

True in a Sense

In speaking of the TWIG the other day, someone referred to "Kryptic Komment" as a "good joke column."

The joke's on me. I thought I was being subtle—if you'll pardon a personal comment.

Ere We Part

"Maid of Gotham, ere we part
Have a hospitable heart—
Since our own good times must end
Introduce me to your friend."

I don't particularly like parodies, but I needed a "parting" paragraph.

TWIGLETS

We wonder, now that stunt night is over and the "odd spirit" classes talk of their mascots, "bones, devils, gleeves," if the freshman class has a mascot. Some one suggested they choose St. Patrick, the patron of all things green.

Do you know how to determine the real age of a person, regardless of his apparent chronological age? It's a question which Oliver Wendell Holmes solved years ago, and on the truth of it depends the success of the B-Hive and drug stores near Meredith. Here's how it's done. Offer the person food of different kinds at short intervals. "If young, he will eat anything at any hour of the day or night. If old, he observes stated periods, and you might as well attempt to regulate the time of high-water to meet a fishing party as to change them. The crucial experiment is this: Offer a bulky and buggy bun to the suspected individual just ten minutes before dinner. If this is eagerly accepted and devoured, the fact of youth is established. If the subject of the question starts back and expresses surprise and incredulity, as if you could not possibly be in earnest, the fact of maturity is no less evident."

Duke University has a new student this year whose name is Cornelius McGillicuddy, Jr., from Philadelphia. A professor who is not well acquainted with baseball or "Connie Mack's" full name inquired of the student if he chanced to know Connie Mack, Jr. We wonder what the reply was, or how the professor felt. And that could happen in a college!

Speaking of Hallowe'en and ghosts, there was a college teacher once who had taught for years and years and was always kept as busy as was humanly possible. She said she believed she'd never get a chance to rest even when she died, because as soon as she was comfortably turned over in her grave, "the devil will come along and tell me to get up, for it's my time to ha'nt." If you see any ghosts, perhaps they'll be that of professors haunted themselves by your comma faults and spelling and themes.

B. S. U. Conference to Meet in Chapel Hill

According to Miss Kate Allison, state president, a good crowd is expected at Chapel Hill, where they will be entertained by the Harvard plan of bed and breakfast free. Plans are being made for fifty Meredith girls to attend the conference. This conference is expected to be the best of its kind ever afforded Baptist Young People in North Carolina.

Professor Spelman Gives First Recital

(Continued from page one) posers. "Will o' the Wisp," by Nevin, proved to be a favorite with the audience. The two final numbers on the program were by Bonnet, one of the world's greatest organists, under whom Prof. Spelman studied in Paris. The first, "Lied Des Chrysanthemes," is a composition written in an intimate and delicate mood, contrasting strongly with the conventional church and concert organ music; while the last, "Variations De Concert," contained four variations of the theme which followed a brilliant introduction, the last variation being interrupted by a pedal cadenza of surpassing brilliance.

Dr. Walter N. Johnson Speaks at Assembly

(Continued from page one) amassing material wealth as never before," and that, "Never were so many organized, intelligent bad people using more inventions than ever before, working together on a world scale as never before, now amassing material wealth as never before." He said, "Our problem today is that mankind has learned to produce faster than he is willing to divide." He also said, in effect, that mankind should voluntarily share the fruits of labor, instead of waiting for government to force him, and that, "A man under grace will go further sharing material goods than any other." In conclusion, Dr. Johnson said, "It doesn't require a prophet to know that this age is one of great crisis," in which the one concern of Christian people is that of "bearing the proper testimony to the presence of Jesus in redeemed life. He stated finally that the religion of Jesus "releases power in us that takes control of material things on the outside and uses them in the testimony of Christ."

Exchanges

We are proud of Chowan's swimming pool, even if we can't have one.

The State Teacher College of Farmville, Virginia, is rivaling the depression by having a weekly recreation night in the gym. They may have to use perpetual motion to win the race.

College Department of Pullen Entertained

The Pullen Memorial Church entertained the College Department with a picnic Saturday evening at Carolina Pines. Approximately eighty members enjoyed an evening of games, songs and stories around a camp fire.

Members of the Pullen Church furnished the means of transportation for the Meredith girls, who left the college about 4:30 o'clock. When they arrived at Carolina Pines, they found the State boys already there.

Various games were played so that all might become acquainted.

Around six o'clock a large campfire was built and here the group ate supper, told stories and sang songs.

They returned to their respective colleges about eight o'clock.
