

The Little Theatre to Sponsor Freshman Play November 19

Miss Ethel English to Direct Rostand's Farcial Comedy "The Romancers"

The Little Theatre will make its initial bow for the season of 1932-'33 by sponsoring the Freshman play, "The Romancers," a farcial comedy by Edmund Rostand, to be given Saturday, November 19.

Miss Ethel E. English, who was largely responsible for the splendid success of the freshman play of last year is to coach this year's production also.

A large number tried out for parts in the play, and an unusual interest in dramatics has been demonstrated by the class as a whole.

Miss English assisted the members of the Little Theatre in selecting the following cast:

Percivet, a lover: Kathleen Johnson.

Strafarel, a bravo, Katy Sams.

Benjamin, father of Percivet,

Weatherford Speaks At Chapel Exercises

On Friday morning, November 4, Dr. J. W. Weatherford, President of the Y. M. C. A. Graduate School and also a specialist on race problems, addressed the student body in chapel on the remarkableness of the change which has taken place in the attitude of people toward each other. He cited examples of ancient times in which the life of persons was not regarded as valuable and contrasted with these examples the high value which is placed upon life today.

He said that civilization has gone back to the basic principles of Jesus as to the value of human life. Jesus gave the "greatest single contribution made to" (Please turn to page two)

Wake Forest Gives Play

I. R. Club Discusses World Problems

The meeting of the International Relations Club on November 1, was opened with a "History of International Relations Clubs," which was given by Miss Nettie Herndon, faculty adviser of the club. Miss Herndon also read a letter to the club from Miss Amy Heminway Jones, executive secretary of the International Relations Clubs, which included a disussion of the books recently received through the Carnegie endowment.

After the business session, in which the constitution of the club was read by Erna Fisher and the new member, Edythe Bagby, was welcomed into the club by the president, Martha Castlebury, the following program was given: "Present Problems in Japan and China," Martha Salisbury; "Disarmament," Martha Castlebury, and "Current Events," by Erna Fisher and Emily Miller.

Society Anniversary Celebrated Yesterday at Wake Forest

Society Day was celebrated for the ninety-eighth year at Wake Forest College on Friday with a schedule of events which was the most entertaining of any had for a number of anniversaries.

The program was begun in the morning when members of the Euzelian and Philomathesian Societies debated. Probably the most interesting feature was the clash between the Demon Deacons and the Carson-Newman eleven on Gore field in the afternoon. On Friday night after an informal banquet orations were given by society members in Wingate Memorial Hall, and at nine-thirty the guests were formally received in the gymnasium.

Gordon Grant, of the Philomathesian Society, presided, and George Griffin of the Euzelians acted as secretary in accordance with the yearly alteration of the societies.

Many of the Meredith girls attended the celebration.

Student Government Sponsors Carnival

According to information received from Mary C. Sherin, President of the Student Government, that organization will sponsor a carnival in the college auditorium on November 22, for the entire student body.

Printed invitations will be sent to friends of the students.

The Student Government is planning a social affair of some kind each month of the year so that the students may become better acquainted with each other and the students of the nearby colleges.

Martha Viccellio is in charge of the social plans.

Thanksgiving Holidays Nov. 23-28

This is the second year that Meredith students have enjoyed the privilege of Thanksgiving holidays. The holidays begin this year at noon on November 23, and last until noon on November 28.

Lefler Gives Present Political Policies

Dr. Hugh T. Lefler, professor of history at State College, spoke to the League of Women Voters at Meredith Thursday evening in the Phi Hall, on the subject "The Present Political Situation." He opened his speech with the statement that unfortunately intelligent people do not determine political elections. He said that there had been very few elections where real issues have been fought since the political battles have been chiefly those of personalities. The speaker continued with the remark that tariff is the only issue which has run continually through political history. In both parties the platforms have been brilliant generalities. Although the party platforms reached the peak of haziness in 1920 the platforms of 1932 are running a close second. In this campaign both major parties have failed to mention outstanding problems. The other candidate, Norman Thomas, has been

Meredith Winner of Poster Exhibit for Past Four Years

The annual North Carolina Baptist Student Conference was held at the First Baptist Church in Chapel Hill, November 2-4, at which time Winston Pearce, Wake Forest College, was elected president, and Marguerite Warren, of Meredith College, was elected secretary.

Approximately two hundred and seventy-five young people from eleven Baptist and State colleges in the State gathered in Chapel Hill for the student conference, under the leadership of Kate Allison, Meredith, president, and Sue Ray, Woman's College, U. N. C., secretary.

Dr. Ellis Fuller, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Atlanta, Ga., who was one of the main speakers of the conference, delivered the principal address Friday night at the opening session, on "Present Power and Survival Value of Christian" (Please turn to page two)

HOBBS ADDRESSES MEREDITH STUDENTS

Dr. J. R. Hobbs, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Birmingham, Alabama, was the chapel speaker of Thursday, November 3. He used a part of Judges 5:31 as the subject of a brief talk. "Let them that love him be as the sun when he goeth forth in his might."

"Everybody," he said, "is interested in love, and the object of love has much to do with the quality of the person. If you tell me what you love, I can tell you what you are."

"To love God," he continued,

Book Week Nov. 13-19

Book Week is to be observed November 13-19. The club women in Raleigh are taking a lead in this movement.

Librarians in the State have been investigating, and their statistics show that more North Carolinians are reading today than ever before, but that only about one-third of them have access to libraries. In forty-seven counties there are no libraries at all. Book Week has meant a great deal in this great furthering of reading, during its short existence.

Meredith has always observed Book Week, and is planning to observe it this year. However, definite plans have not as yet been made.

Properties of "34 Words" Sold at Auction

"Right this way, Juniors, to get your money's worth," or words to that effect, called the Juniors to a corner of the gymnasium Wednesday night, November 2, to an auction sale of the properties used in the stunt, "34 Words," which won the cup for the class of '34.

Before the auctioneering began, the orchestra gave the selection which they played in the stunt, after which the auctioneer, Peg LeGrand, first auctioned off the tables which were used by the "famous stenographers and dancers." Then the hatrack, on which the stenographers had "allowed" their hats to be placed, was sold "at quite a bargain." The "Heart 'n Love Repair Shop," and the shelter which was in front of it were then auctioned, and now grace the entrances to the boudoirs of Katherine Davis and Peg LeGrand.

After the stunt properties had all been sold, the orchestra played again, and the Juniors enjoyed a social hour, during which cider was served from the athletic cup and the stunt cup, both of which are in the possession of the Juniors at the present time.
