

B. S. U. Notes

Meeting of the B. Y. P. U. Officers
The general officers of the B. Y. P. U. held their regular monthly business meeting Thursday afternoon. At this time the various officers discussed their work and plans for the coming month.

Vespers

Vesper services were held Sunday evening in the Blue Parlor. Doris Bailey played quiet music on the violin after which there was a chain of sentence prayers. The theme of Vespers was "Ghosts." It was brought out that we all had such ghosts in our lives as fear, public opinion, and superstition. Pauline Perry showed us that the only way to overcome these "ghosts" was through faith in God. The service was concluded by singing "God Will Take Care of You."

Contest

In order to create more enthusiasm in B. Y. P. U. work, a contest has been planned. This contest is to be based on program giving. The group giving the best program, according to rules decided upon by the judges, will be given points. At the end of a certain time, it will be determined which union has won. A report of the progress of the program will be given later.

Party

Girls having birthdays in October were honored at a party Thursday night. Ella Lee Yates had charge of it. The girls were conducted on a "dark tour" of the attic and the tunnel. The tour ended in the dining room where freshments were served. Following this Miss Knight told a group of ghost stories.

Attend Conference

The following students from Meredith attended the B. S. U. Conference at Campbell College this week-end: Ruth Abernethy, Frances Alderman, Dixie Lee Bale, Katherine Blalock, Essie Campbell Cooper, Louise Correll, Frances Calloway, Betsy Hocutt, Louise Hocutt, Grace Lawrence, Lois Morgan, Miriam McCarter, Mae Marshburn, Loretta Nichols, Grace Phelps, Pearl Robertson, Bertha Mae Stroud, Ruth Tucker, Vara Lee Thornton, Josephine Turner, Annie Mae Taylor, Sara Elizabeth Vernon, Marquerite Warren, Margaret Whittington, Ella Lee Yates. Pat Abernethy was there, and Agnes Gentry, who was home for the week-end, attended some of the meetings.

For the first time in 45 years the student body of Gettysburg college is composed entirely of men. The battlefield institution, entering upon its 192nd year, decided four years ago to allow no more co-eds to matriculate, and the "last musketeers" of the fair sex graduated last June.—Duke Chronicle.

Raleigh Stamp Club

It may be interesting to stamp collectors on the campus to learn that a stamp club has been organized recently in Raleigh. This club, known as the Raleigh Stamp Club, has at the present time approximately forty members, some of whom have been collecting stamps for more than 40 years. Meetings are held each first and third Tuesday evening at which time the members assemble and exchange news concerning new stamp issues. The club also conducts a stamp exchange by means of which members are able to dispose of duplicate stamps.

Interested students are invited to meet with the club at 120½ Fayetteville Street.

ticularly in the Sophomore Class, before Sophomore privileges were withdrawn. The Sophomores "had it in for the Freshmen." If they were successful in their stealing, a duplicate of the Freshman stunt was given. Since stunts were then presented in the same order as now, the Freshmen were at loss. This year the Freshmen gave the stunt "It Pays to Advertise." They used several advertisements such as "Coca-Cola, Woodbury," etc. The Sophomores succeeded in stealing portions of the stunt and composed a song which they used as the last part of their stunt. These are the words:

O you newish
With your homesick, homesick size,
O you newish
Does it pay to advertise?
You can rave about Woodbury Soap
But when it comes to Coca-Cola, we've got the dope
O you newish
Does it pay to advertise?

This was written to the tune of "Barney Google." At one time it seemed that it was a tradition for the Seniors to win the stunt.

The stunts, for a while, tended to be of a certain type for certain classes. The Senior stunt seemed to vary: the Sophomore's was "loud and rowdy" and the Freshmen gave stunts which were more of the "high-school" type.

The loving cup was given for the first time in 1923. The Seniors won it that year.

Thus, the stunt night has grown, becoming more original and elaborate through the years, affording opportunity for class rivalry.

At this time, the stunts are judged on the ability of the class to keep within the time limit, on the presentation, and on originality. The winning class is awarded the silver loving cup for a year's possession.

CLASS OF '34 WINS STUNT NIGHT CUP FOR THIRD YEAR

been murdered. A detective was called in, and a deep investigation was taking place when the nephew walked in. The Chinese laundryman and the cook got together and it finally developed that the cook had gone NRA and was striking for extra wages. The detective was especially well portrayed. The cook and laundrymen added a great deal of atmosphere to the play, for they both spoke Chinese.

The junior stunt was called "Round in '35." It portrayed the trials of insects who live on the fairway of a golf course. The insects were having a merry time of it when a gigantic golf ball came tumbling in and killed one of their number. After much lamentation and deliberation they decided to move over on the rough. They did so, but as soon as they had made themselves at home, that terrible golf ball came rolling in again, bearing destruction to the poor insects.

The sophomore play, "The Cheese Code of 36," was a take-off on the NRA. The scene was laid in Holland. Lanklin D. Limburgervelt decides that to bring back prosperity to his village his people must churn their own cheese. This is a marvelous plan, and works so successfully that Mr. Limburgervelt and Mr. Curd Switzer become reconciled to the marriage of their son and daughter, Roquefort Limburgervelt and Pimento Switzer. The setting of this stunt was especially attractive.

Perhaps the biggest sensation of the evening was the presence of a real cow on the stage in the sophomore stunt. The poor cow seemed a little bewildered by its sudden popularity, but on the whole behaved very well. But it seems that even the novelty of a cow could not rival the human interested aroused by the presence of young Samson Henry Lowrance III as Master Class.

Professor Paget of State College presented the cup to the senior class. He made the excellent suggestion that in the future each stunt be limited to one set, or if not, that we be allowed to see the carpenters at work, since so much time was consumed in changing scenery.

Book and Pamphlets Received by I. R. C.

The International Relations Club has received its first installment of books and pamphlets which are given each year through the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. The books are:

- The Great Illusion*, 1933, by Sir Norman Angell.
 - The Bank for International Settlements*, by Eleanor Dublee.
 - International Government*, by Clyde Eagleton.
 - World Prosperity*, by Wallace McClure.
 - Will They Pay?* by D. Richardson.
 - Historical Evolution of Hispanic America*, by Fred Rippey.
- In addition to these are the pamphlets:
- American Foreign Policy*, by S. D. Myres, Jr.
 - The Disarmament Conference*.
 - The Monthly Summary of League of Nations and The International Labour Reviews* have been subscribed to for the college library.

All these books have been placed in the library so that students, as well as members of the club, may use them.

Girls Auxiliary House Party Is Held at Meredith

The G. A. house party of the past week-end was sponsored by Miss Alva Lawrence, state Baptist young people's leader.

Miss Pearl Bourne, of Birmingham, Alabama, was one of the chief speakers. Two other outstanding speakers were Mrs. Carter Wright and Mrs. J. S. Farmer, a former missionary.

After the evening address Friday, a party was given honoring the visitors. Saturday morning a play was given by the members of the Tabernacle Girls' Auxiliary. Saturday afternoon Mrs. Charles Leonard, a former missionary, assisted by her daughter, Miss Leonard, and by Miss Mary Fay McMillan conducted a world tour. There was a campfire service Saturday night. After this the girls attended the annual Stunt Night sponsored by the Meredith Athletic Association.

We again take pleasure in extending welcome to all
