

GREEK TRAGEDY TO BE PRESENTED SOON BY LITTLE THEATRE

Dr. Florence Hoagland and Dr. Helen Price to Direct Iphigenia in Touris

Euripides' tragedy, Iphigenia in Tauris has been chosen as the second and last major production of the Little Theatre for this year. This Greek tragedy will be presented in the court late in April or early in May. The Little Theatre will be aided in the presentation by the Classical Club, the Music Department, and the Art Department. The play will be under the direction of Dr. Florence Hoagland and Dr. Helen Price.

This play is not a tragedy in the modern sense of the word. It is rather a romantic play, opening in a tragic atmosphere, moving through perils and escapes to a happy end. It is adapted from an old Greek legend which recounts how when Agamemnon was sailing against Troy he was bound by weather at Aulis. The medicine man demanded that he sacrifice his daughter, Iphigenia, who was then at home with her mother. Supposedly the girl was sacrificed but in reality the goddess Artemis rescued her and carried her to the land of the Tauri to be her priestess. The Tauri had a savage ritual in connection with the worship of Artemis which demanded that all strangers coming to that land be sacrificed to the goddess. It fell to the lot of Iphigenia to consecrate the victims as they entered to be slain and she waited with revenge in her heart for the coming of a Greek to the land. The first Greeks to arrive were her brother, Orestes, who had been sent by Apollo to take the image of Artemis from the land, and his friend Pylades. Iphigenia failed to recognize her brother, who was a mere child when she left home, and offered to one of the two escape from death on the condition that he take a letter home to her people. Orestes refused to take the letter, but

Dr. Thomas Dixon Gives Address in Raleigh

Dr. Thomas Dixon, noted author and orator, delivered a lecture in the Memorial Auditorium of Raleigh, March 19, which was enthusiastically received by all who heard him. As a representative of the National Recovery Association. Dr. Dixon spoke on the subject "This Country of Ours." He appealed, as he has done in a number of American cities, to the patriotism of his listeners, asking them to support the program initiated by President Roosevelt and to keep their faith in the future of the country.

A lawyer, a preacher, a statesman, an author and a playwright, Dr. Dixon has led an eventful and intensely interesting life. He is a native of Shelby, N. C., and was educated at Wake Forest College, Greensboro Law School, and Johns Hopkins. When only twenty-one he served in the North Carolina Legislature, but resigned to become a Baptist minister. He has held pastorates in Raleigh, Boston, and New York. A few of the books he has written are: "The Leopard's Spots," "The Traitor," "A Man of the People" (a play), and "The Clansman." Because of his varied experiences Dr. Dixon seems particularly capable to interpret the program of the National Recovery Association to America.
