

SOPHOMORE CLASS CAPTURES MUCH-PRIZED STUNT TROPHY

"Puppet Love" Given By Juniors and Wins Second Place

The coveted stunt night cup was captured Saturday evening, November 3, by the sophomore class with a burlesque packed with laughter and originality. The junior class won second place with a clever and colorful drama in two acts.

Set in the "backyard of the Spudd home—in the back hills—the very back hills" in "the gay nineties—the very gay nineties" and titled "Good Form or the Rise of Eudora Spudd," the sophomore stunt had the audience shouting laughter from the first glimpse of the stage to the final curtain. Briefly, the stunt was concerned with the story of Herman Beanblossom (Margaret Kramer), a representative of Ketchum, Holdum, and Bindum Company, who went to the back hills to sell bustles to the mountaineers' wives and daughters, and fell in love with Eudora Spudd (Kate Covington), the comely daughter of Maw and Paw Spudd (Katherine Shuford and Katherine Martin), and how he overrode their objections to bustles and bustle salesmen and carried Eudora off to New York. The sight of a dummy dressed in an elaborate red silk dress and bustle, which Mr. Beanblossom called "a form worn below the waist to extend the skirts," won Maw completely, but Paw was not so easily handled. "I ain't gonna have my Eudora in no sich shape," said he, but he was persuaded to give his consent to the wedding if Herman would make his Eudora the most popular girl in "these hyar parts." Then came a barn dance in which Eudora, dressed in a blue print dress and a bustle, was the belle of the ball so completely eclipsing the former belle, Pearly Buttons Daniels (Dorothy Deane Brown) that Maw and Paw allowed Herman and Eudora to make a dramatic exit for New York on a bicycle built for two.

Other members of the cast were Ruth Saunders, Grace Porter, Ruby Barrett, Faith Hite, Catherine Canady, Sarah Collins, Gwendolyn Kester, Grace Neal Cashwell, Mataline Nye, Frances Pittman, Eleanor Early, Natalie Johnson, and Susan Rudisill. (Please turn to page four)

Collegiate Press Convention Meets in High Point

The fall Convention of the North Carolina Collegiate Press met in High Point, North Carolina, November 8, 9, and 10. Mr. H. Hiden Ramsey, President of the North Carolina Press Association and also general manager of the Asheville Citizens Times, was the principal speaker of the session.

Mr. Ramsey addressed the convention banquet, which was held in the Sheraton Hotel on Friday night, climaxing the Convention program which did not close until the following morning when the final business session was held.

Among others who spoke at the Convention were John W. Cannon, manager of the Greensboro Daily News local bureau, who addressed the editors; John Mebane of the High Point Enterprise staff, who addressed the college magazine editors, having formerly edited the magazine of the University of North Carolina; and Lister C. Pope, former editor of the Duke Archive, who gave a most interesting discussion on the editing of annuals.

The High Point Enterprise was the host at a luncheon given on Friday in honor of those attending the con- (Please turn to page three)

FIRST STUNT DAY SPONSORED BY ATH- LETIC ASSOCIATION

Classes Compete in Various Contests Held on Campus

Meredith College held its first Play Day, under the direction of Miss Marian Warner, Saturday, November 3. The day was spent in interclass contests and contests among alumnae and students.

The opening feature, which was a tree-planting, at two o'clock, displayed the originality of each class in a more serious manner. Each class planted a tree on the west campus, the seniors receiving the prize for the most impressive ceremony.

Following this there were various sports contests between the alumnae and the students. The students won all the tennis matches except one, Elizabeth Ayscue, of the class of '31 winning over Mary "Lib" Dobson, '37. Those playing tennis were: Pauline Covington, '36—Mrs. Maude Davis Bunn, '10; Nancy Bunn, '36—Pat Abernethy, '33; Hazel Boswell, '36—Miss Ethel English, '22; Faith Hite, '37—Elizabeth Apple, '30.

The students won the volleyball game. Those playing were: "Spec" Harris, '33; Helen Bennett, '33; Ruth Robertson, '34; and Margaret Seymour (class of '38, but playing for alumnae); Alice Bryan, '35; Martha Ann Riley, '36; Martha Messenger, '37, and Frances Olive, '38.

The students also won at croquet. (Please turn to page two)

Teachers Association Held at Hugh Morson

The Twelfth Annual Convention of the North Carolina District Teachers Association was held in Raleigh on November 9th and 10th. The Hugh Morson High School was Convention Headquarters, with Mr. P. S. Daniel, Raleigh City Superintendent, acting as host. The general theme of the convention was "Education for the New Era."

On Friday evening at the meeting of the superintendents and principals the two speakers were Jule B. Warren of Raleigh, Secretary of the North Carolina Education Association who gave "The Program of Work of the North Carolina Education Association for this year," and Dr. Rollo G. Reynolds, Horace Mann School, Teachers College, Columbia University, New York.

At the dinner for classroom teachers on Friday evening Cameron Beck, Director of the New York Stock Exchange Institute, New York, spoke on "Leadership for Tomorrow." Mr. Beck also spoke at the first general session on Friday afternoon on "The Necessity of Closer Relations Between Business and the School."

Student Body, Alumnae, Faculty and Trustees Pay Tribute

Dr. E. McNeil Poteat, Jr., delivered the memorial address Sunday afternoon, November 4, at the service held to commemorate the life and service of Dr. Delia Dixon Carroll, who was the college physician for thirty-five years.

Professor Leslie P. Spelman, head of the Music Department, opened the service with the prelude, Andante Cantabile, by Tschaiakowsky. The invocation was led by Dr. I. M. Mercer, of the Religion Department.

Expressions of appreciation of Dr. Carroll were brought from representatives of her friends and associates. Catherine Moseley, president of the Student Government Association, spoke in behalf of the student body; Mrs. R. C. Josey, Jr. (Anna Kitchin) of Scotland Neck, N. C., spoke in the absence of Mrs. Ernest H. Leggett, president of the Alumnae Association, in behalf of the alumnae; Dr. L. E. M. Freeman, head of the Religion Department, brought a message in behalf of the Meredith faculty; and Dr. J. Rufus Hunter, chairman of the board of trustees, expressed the appreciation of the trustees.

Following these tributes the College Choir sang "The Lord's My Shepherd" by Smart.

Dr. Poteat, in speaking of Dr. Carroll, said she was a modernist, not in an individual sense, but as "an admirer of modern ways, fashions, and schools of thought. She was a blend of the best of the past and of the present."

In concluding Dr. Poteat said, "I think if she could take form in our presence today and be asked to speak a word from her life she would say: Find for yourself loyalties that are as deep as life and as eternal and commanding as God. Then strike out into your sea. The waves of dissent or disparagement or disdain may buffet and confuse you, but with your compass set by the unmoving and unmovable pole-star, you will achieve a journey's end worthy of yourself and God."

Dr. R. T. Vann, former president of Meredith, was present, and after the singing of the Alma Mater, which was written by him, he pronounced the benediction.

Echoes From the Memphis Conference

By LOUISE CORRELL

As the full tones of an organ filled the South Hall of Memorial Auditorium in Memphis, Tenn., two thousand or more students and their leaders gathered for the opening session of the third South-wide B. S. U. Conference. This was Thursday evening, October 25.

Dr. W. F. Powell of Nashville, Tenn., gave the keynote address on "Making Christ My Master," stating that there are three groups on our campuses today, namely: the non-theistic, the religious indifferent, and the master's minority who "hear God's trumpets in the morning." We need to make Christ our master, so that through Him, our lives may become a powerful force. "He will give us wisdom by which to live."

At the close of the first session, the delegates assembled in the huge North Hall of the Auditorium for a "get-together."

Friday morning's program included some of the most outstanding features of the entire conference. Dr. S. D. Gordon whom all of us love, opened this session (as he did all of the sessions) with one of his famous "Quiet Talks." Mr. Charles A. Wells, internationally known cartoonist, gave a most impressive and stirring message on "Sharing." He illustrated this in a manner which none of us who were present will ever forget. The closing "treat" of the morning was an address by Dr. T. S. Dunning of London, who was a visitor on our Meredith campus, October 18.

Personal Recollections of Dr. Carroll

By DR. R. T. VANN

"One of the most outstanding characteristics of Dr. Delia Dixon Carroll was her deep-seated and unflinching loyalty to her own convictions, to her religious faith, and to her own friends," said Dr. R. G. Vann in an interview last week following the memorial service to the former Meredith physician. Dr. Vann was closely connected with Dr. Carroll during his years as president of Meredith and remained after his retirement one of her most intimate friends.

"I knew Delia from the time she was a tiny baby," said Dr. Vann. "Her oldest brother, Clarence (Dr. A. C. Dixon), and I were roommates and classmates at college and at the seminary, and the summer following our graduation I visited in the Dixon home. Delia was then two years old.

The only recollection I have of her on that visit was the trip from their home on Buffalo Creek, four miles from Shelby, to the tent of a traveling photographer to get a picture of Delia. Her mother took Clarence and me along to help manage Delia, but the baby cooed and chattered so much that we couldn't get a picture without first putting her to sleep. This we finally did, and I have somewhere among my pictures, one of Delia, at the age of two years, stretched out fast asleep upon a trunk."

"At brief intervals during the next few years I visited in the Dixon home, and on one of these, I recall that I carried her one of the first dolls she ever owned. I saw her again at the wedding of her brother when she was (Please turn to page three)
