

TILDEN ADVISES WOMEN AGAINST STRENUOUS PLAY

"If I can convince women that they are not physically able to hold out for three sets of net play in tennis, I shall feel that I have done women's tennis a good turn," said "Big Bill" Tilden to a group of three-hundred Meredith tennis enthusiasts Wednesday afternoon, April 3rd. The tennis king paid a visit to the college campus while in Raleigh on a tour with Vines, Lott and Stoeffen.

Mr. Tilden said that this is a day in which men and women compete on equal footing in most fields. However, there are definite physical limitations to the prowess of women in athletics, and it is not wise for them to attempt to compete with men on the same grounds. Of the many women players he has seen, including the two outstanding women players, Helen Wills and Helen Jacobs, he has never seen one who was able to stand against the terrific strain of net play. For this reason, Mr. Tilden advised women to develop strong forehand and backhand strokes, using mainly long cross-court drives. He stated that women who used this method of play were just as great, if not greater, artists in tennis as those who played a net game.

Legislator to Speak
The educational situation and the students' relationship to it will be described by R. H. McDonald, a member of the convening legislature. Following his talk, Mr. McDonald will lead an Open Forum discussion on problems arising.

Discussions Will Be Held
At 11:00, representatives from men's and women's colleges will divide to discuss the special problems in each. The men's division will be led by Joel Paul, of the University of North Carolina. Margaret McClean, president of the Student Body, Salem College, will lead the women's group.

Greetings from Dr. Charles E. Brewer, president of Meredith College, and Miss Caroline Biggers, Dean of Women, will be extended during the lunch hour in the Virginia Dare Ball Room.

Address By Coates
Dr. Albert Coates, of the Institute of Government, University of North Carolina is to be the afternoon speaker. His address will be on some phase of political and governmental affairs.

A feature of the afternoon session will be a tour of places of interest in the city, such as the Capitol, Governor's Mansion, Hall of History, State Library, State Hospital, and State Penitentiary.

Officers for the coming year will be elected Saturday afternoon, at 5:30 in the Manteo Room. The place for the next conference is also to be chosen. The closing session of the meeting will be the formal banquet, at 8:15 in the Virginia Dare Ball Room.

It Happens Every Night
By DOROTHY ANN FORD

Hair, that has been pinned up in screw curls all day, is miraculously transformed into glistening ringlets; noses that outshone the stars are powdered and smooth, and cheeks, pale at noon time, glow like the rising sun—when you have a caller in the parlor.

The familiar old campus skirt is replaced by a long trailing one and company manners are presented. For simply hours and hours (seven-thirty until eight) the weather is discussed. After fully developing this topic you suggest a short stroll around the Senior parlor. By taking short steps, pausing to speak and slowing down to pass other hikers, you may kill ten minutes.

Then upon your return, you'll find the couch that once was yours has been seized. Giving the new possessors a haughty glance, you sullenly retire to the wicker chairs.

If your date is thoughtful, he may produce a crossword puzzle or the material for a hectic game of tit-tat-toe. At about 9:45, you begin to remember all the things you must tell him. He also discovers that he has left much unsaid and words fall thick and fast. Then with a shock you hear the loud clanging of the "And so Goodbye" bell. "Goodnights," "call me," and "I'll see you thens" are said and you go your way while he goes his.
