

"What's Sauce For the Goose"

By KATHERINE SHUFORD

There seems to be a perfect epidemic of sizing up the other sex 'come springtime'—Meredith girls recently came in for their share of critical cognizance (with no words minced) and since our grandmothers—out of years of experience in dealing with the deadly male—tell us that "what's sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," I beg to submit not a criticism of the men we know—but a description of the man we like (that's much more subtle. Note: This information is gleaned from authentic sources, such as after-light-bell-discussions and post-date consultations).

In the first place, he must not be callow. That is the besetting sin. He may have all the good points of Galahad but if he's a Silly Bill (see Booth Tarkington's Seventeen) he won't be tolerated.

Some girls won't admit it, but most of us really prefer men with sterling qualities to the dashing, fascinating lady-killer kind whose vices definitely outweigh his virtues. By sterling qualities we mean forswearance of the Demon Drink, faithfulness to the One Girl, avoidance of the Foul Oath, et cetera. That doesn't necessarily mean he's a prig—it simply indicates that he's a person to be depended upon. But as one Meredith girl says cynically, "You certainly appreciate a man with sterling qualities when you do meet one, wouldn't you?"

Those are the major points—but there are some minor ones that seem awfully important sometimes. One of the chief of these is modesty. What a flood of "ayes" descend when the statement "Aren't men the most conceited things?" is made in any group of Meredith girls! It's not that we mind a man's thinking he's just about the finest thing there ever was—but why does he have to try to convince us too? We know he's a "Power with th' Wimmin'" or we wouldn't be dating him 'most likely, so why does he bore us to tears with tales of his conquests?

It seems strange when a man's first thought is "What does she look like?" that the question of appearance seldom comes up at all in the Meredith girls' discussions of men. It doesn't matter what he looks like so long as he talks about something other than himself occasionally, and is properly attentive.

Meredith girls are not, as a whole particularly "choosy" about their men, but, in the words of our brother the Colonel, we like them "well-balanced."

Meredith Girls Attend N. C. Student Federation

The North Carolina Federation of Students will meet in Greenville, N. C. March 26-27, at the Proctor Hotel with Eastern Carolina Teacher's College acting as hostess. The formal opening will take place Thursday night, March 26 and there will be discussions groups held both Friday morning and afternoon and Saturday morning. There are to be a number of well-known speakers present, Friday and Saturday morning. The final session will be held Saturday afternoon followed up by a formal dinner and a dance Saturday night. The Meredith delegates are Ann Bradsher, Ruby Barrett, Sue Brewer, and Margaret Clarke.

Meredith College was the hostess to this federation last year, and the guests were entertained at the Sir Walter Hotel. During this conference, Ann Bradsher was elected secretary of the federation.

At the same time of the North Carolina Federation of Students there will be a meeting of the Southern Federation of Women's Colleges at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia. Meredith will not be represented at this conference.

There will be a joint meeting of the Southern and Southeastern divisions of the National Student Federation of America in Memphis, Tennessee, April 16-18 with Southwestern University and the University of Mississippi acting as co-hosts. Whether or not Meredith will send a delegate has not been decided.

RUBY BARRETT HEADS STUDENT BODY of the B. S. U., including chorister, circle leader of Y. W. A., and officer in B. Y. P. U. In addition she is president of the choir, member of the glee club, member of the International Relations Club, Barber Biology Club, and the Little Theatre. Ruth Abernethy has also been outstanding in the B. S. U. and in athletics. She is manager of archery this year and she has taken part in several dramatic productions, including her society play for the past two years. She has been assistant post-mistress for her three years and she is one of the two junior members of the Silver Shield.

committee is now turning its attention to securing aid from friends on the outside who are responding in an interested way. "When students, faculty and alumnae really get behind a project, then friends are also going to respond," says Miss Marguerite Mason, chairman of the finance committee.

The building committee hopes to have the preliminary sketches before commencement.

B. S. U. Notes

The brother-sister spirit between Meredith and Wake Forest seems to be growing more brotherly and sisterly lately. Tomorrow night a group of Meredith Training Union members will present a program at the Wake Forest Baptist Church. The theme of the program will be "And He Went A Little Further," making a study of the life of Christ.

Wasn't that some social the Wake Forest boys put on last Saturday night? Many have said it was the best yet. We do appreciate the Glee Club, quartet, jug band, and every effort that was extended in bringing such a program to Meredith.

Another incidence of the brother-sister experience was on Sunday night, when a group of the B.S.U. Council of Wake Forest had charge of Vespers. Will we ever forget that quartet singing "Day Is Dying in the West" and "Fairest Lord Jesus"; the talk on taking advantages of wayside opportunities; and the poem on "The Mill Wheel"?

Meredith girls are invited to take a program to Chapel Hill soon. Such a program is being planned for April 26. We think this will indeed be a fine piece of extension work.

Do you go to assembly of B.T.U. on Wednesday? If you don't, you are surely missing one of the high moments of college life. The individual unions are furnishing special music and Dorothy Washburn is leading in a marvelous way.

MR. R. H. BROWN SPEAKS ON PURPOSE AND WORK OF NYA

ing reviewed the principal occupations open to women, he advised, "Be sure you are not too sure. You cannot expect to start upon the level where your parents have left off." It is of most importance in the speaker's opinion, for the American youth to gain perspective and an appreciation of the glory of work.
