

LITTLE THEATRE PRESENTS ONE ACT PLAY IN CHAPEL

The Little Theatre presented a one act play in chapel Thursday, January 14, entitled "Time Is Short" by Dorothea Stone. The play emphasized the importance of time in the war effort and the necessity of using every minute. It was given as a radio broadcast, with Annie Mary Matthews, Carolyn Kenyon, Betty Rose Prevatte, Nan Davis, Elizabeth Shelton, Nelda Ferguson, Frances Crain, Evelyn La Salle, Jessie Belle Utley, Margaret Roberson, Mr. Dorsett, Mr. Charles and Mr. Rembert taking part. Evelyn Bowers had charge of the program, and Miss Bailey directed the play which was sent out from the War Department.

On January 19, a two-act pantomime was presented in chapel under the direction of Virginia Byrum. The first act, which was written by Miss Ellen Brewer, portrayed the table manners of a well-bred Miss Meredith in contrast to those of the Goops, an ill-mannered family. The second act, which was written by Miss Frances Bailey, contrasted Miss Goop and Miss Meredith on a date.

What Makes Your World Go 'Round? What Do You Want From Life?

Religious Emphasis Week is a summation of the year's concentration on the living of a more beautiful life. It is just a climax and not the thing in itself. We simply emphasize that which makes our life click. It is not a week set aside for being good and maybe a little hypocritical. It is more or less a means to an end. It is not the end in itself, but is a stimulating force which leads us on to seek to attain, idealistically speaking, the things that we, in our own minds, consider the most worthy goals.

We can never set a goal high enough—for if it were in reach, it would not be respected and worked for. And when we did reach the things that we had held as more or less sacred, we would be self-satisfied at second rate attainments. We must go on straining for the truth, for the truth is only where you find it. We seek the "right" in many different ways—it's all according to the individual, how she sets out in her quest and what destination she hopes to arrive at.

Religious Emphasis Week has helped many students to clarify questions that face them every day—questions which if not solved will be the bug-a-boo of one's very existence. Nothing is compulsory about the student participation—only the student herself. What she is seeking to find. And that which she finds will be so different from what she expected—only to learn that her philosophy has changed and that she can no longer be happy—she must continue the following of the gleam, realizing that a theory of life, to be adequate, must change with the times and with the individual. A belief of this kind—the faith in a higher power—necessitates the continuation of the search. Religion is nothing static—the more you have, the more you have. Religion is life itself. It is the very wheels of being.

Wars may come and wars may go, but one thing is sound—and it fits in with the situations at hand. Religion is why we have a week of this sort. To help us realize its
