

February Meeting of Sociology Club

On Tuesday night, February 15, the Sociology Club held its regular meeting in the Astro Hall. The committee in charge of the annual project of the club reported the progress of its work, showing poster charts based on the number of students in the Meredith student body in past years and on the distribution of these students geographically. The members were quite interested to note the way Meredith has drawn more and more students each year from outside the state.

Following the presentation of the project, Elva Creech reported on the work several of the members are doing at the Wake County Welfare Department in the capacity of receptionists. Evelyn Dillon told about the civic contributions of other students who are giving one or two afternoons to Travelers' Aid work at the bus station.

With the conclusion of the business session, Cornell Brunt, program chairman, introduced Mrs. B. Y. Tyner, the speaker of the evening. Mrs. Tyner's topic was "Community Leadership." She brought to the attention of the students the fact that college trained young women will be expected to take places of leadership in the community and that they should definitely plan for this work. Her main suggestion was that the students should all consciously develop pleasant personalities, always remaining poised. They must be able to talk intelligently with anyone about his interests and to make attractive, informative talks to all groups. Courtesy, Mrs. Tyner emphasized, is the most essential characteristic of a good leader.

After Mrs. Tyner's talk, an informal social hour was enjoyed.
