

Home Economics Students Stress Food Conservation

Home Economics students are hoping to find victory gardens when they reach home this summer, and they are planning to fill their pantry shelves with canned goods. Records of last year's activities show that students in this department canned or assisted in canning 7,005 quarts of fruits and vegetables. This summer, basing their estimates on the number in the department and the standard suggested for the state of 56 quarts per family member they have set their goal at 13,000 quarts.

Students assisted last week in the food conservation program by putting on canning demonstrations for the women of Raleigh in three of the city schools—Wiley, Murphy, and Barbee. On Thursday, they showed how to use the simple equipment, available in any home, for canning acid vegetables and fruits, while on Friday they demonstrated the use of the pressure canner. Those participating in these programs included Anna Ruth Dixon, Virginia Bailey, Willa Lee Joyner, Flo Hewett, Virginia Lee, Katie Carpenter, Ruth Wyman, and Ethylene Bryson. The Home Economics Club hopes its members will be useful in similar projects in their local communities this summer.

Plans For Mission Are Well Underway

Things are happening so fast at the mission that it is hard to keep up with all the latest progress. Last month it was learned that Evelyn Hampton would be employed as a full time worker of the W.M.U., for the summer, and work at the mission. Now, plans are underway for the purchase of the building. Various churches in town are contributing to the fund for this purchase. As soon as the building is bought, Hayes Barton Baptist Church is going to give the paint which State and Meredith students will have put on the building. The chairs and tables for the beginners are also going to be painted and various repairs made.

The North Carolina W.M.U. wishes to make it a Good Will Center. At present, North Carolina has no Good Will Center on a very large scale. However, the establishment of such a Center does not mean that Meredith students will cease to be a part of the mission. They will continue to work there as usual.

ORCHESTRA PROGRAMS

Under the direction of Mrs. Alden, the combined orchestra, made up of students from St. Mary's, Peace, and Meredith, gave a series of concerts Tuesday morning, May 18. The first was held at St. Mary's at 8:30, the second at Peace at 9:30, and the third at Meredith at 10:30. This was the only performance of the year of the combined group.
