MEREDITH STUDENTS TAKE PART IN PLAY

The Wesley Foundation on the State College campus presented an Easter play, "The Seamless Coat," on Easter Sunday evening at its regular meeting. The characters in the play were Ed R. Cole, as Mare, a Roman soldier; Bill Nicholson as Claudius, his friend; Grace Johnson as Miriam, a follower of the Nazarene; and Jimmy Deas, as Erastus, a man who had been beaten and robbed by thieves.

The play was directed by Juanita Statt.

The scene was laid in a Roman home in Jerusalem on the evening of the third day after the crucifixion of Christ. Very briefly, the plot consists of Miriam winning Mare to Christ by her generosity, kindness, and earnestness. The climax was reached when Miriam gave the much cherished seamless coat, that she had bought from Mare to the shivering Erastus. A shaft of light falling on the kneeling Miriam and Mare, and a voice of Christ along with softly played music of exaltation, formed a dramatic and impressive background.
