the merger of the two colleges, and pledged their wholehearted support to an attempt to defeat the merger at the meeting of the convention in November. Horthy Liles and Nelda Ferguson, students, spoke on "What Meredith Means to the Students and to the Alumnae."

Student Opposition

Students themselves voiced their opposition to the Meredith-Wake Forest merger on Thursday morning, October 19, at the regular student government chapel meeting and voted to "strongly oppose" the merger. The following resolution was passed by the student body with regard to the question—

"Resolved, that we, the Students of Meredith College, are strongly opposed to the proposed merger of Meredith College with Wake Forest College for the following reasons:

1. The proposed plan would vastly limit the opportunities for leadership such as we enjoy here in a women's college.
2. A higher academic rating would not result, for at present a degree from Meredith College is equal to the Bachelor of Arts degree from any university in North Carolina.
3. The cultural, educational, and religious opportunities afforded us by our advantageous location in the city of Raleigh would be sacrificed in the event of a change of location.

4. The friendly spirit of co-operation and understanding which exists between faculty and students here at Meredith is a rare and treasured possession, one which would be almost entirely lacking in a school of the type that this proposal would establish.

5. The spiritual atmosphere of Meredith which has been built up through the years could not be transplanted without loss of identity.

As one student has expressed it, with the unanimous approval of the student body, "we want very much for Meredith to remain as Meredith now, henceforth, and forevermore!"

Crooking was begun in 1906 by Miss Carolyn Burr Phelps. Then, in 1913, the crook was put to rest, but it didn't rest long, because in 1929, it was brought forth again.
