ROLL CALL

By BRADLEY

Listen, upperclassmen, and you shall hear
Of the freshman angels at the Farm this year.
On September seventeenth of forty-six, They came in a drove and began to mix. Warm southern parts and cold Yankee-land,
The very country and metropolis grand, Foreign soil and the old home state
Sent us eighty-five freshmen, seeking their fate.
A multitude of angels, a heavenly host, Is really something of which to boast. They're long and they're short, They're big and they're small, Halos and wings don't fit them all.
Second Stringfield is a good place to start:
There live two gals who are mighty smart.
Two M's they are: MORGAN and MOORE—
BETSY and GAZELLE with a "Busy" on the door.
Silver Spring, Maryland, sent us two, FAULCONER and WHITTAKER, forever true.
With red-rimmed specs and letters to write, They never have time to fuss or to fight. Of those in style and clothed with "it," ANN and ELEANOR really make a hit. Yep, JOSEY and SUGG are a handsome pair
The Farm can be proud of anywhere. MARY BUNCH is the gal with the past; She was a WAC while the war did last. A special student is DOROTHY COX— She'd like to take Spanish away in a box,
PHOEBE ANN ARLEDGE came and went—
With a groom she considered her time better spent.
DORIS CONCHA is a favorite New Yorker;
She's competition for any southern corker.
The piano with a boogie beat Is MARTHA ROBERTS' particular feat. Letters, food, and a novel to write Make heaven CINDY RENNER'S any night.
Those foreign fields mentioned before Are Cuba, China, England, Ecuador: BEATRIZ, EMILY, VIDA, and JEAN Are four new angels you must have seen.
RANKIN, MARY LEE, and TAYLOR, SALLY Hail from Virginia, and I do mean "r'ally!"
There are many more that I haven't space to name,
But after a while, you'll know them by fame—
And so, upperclassmen, with your heads held high,
Recognize the Freshmen — they'll be Seniors by and by!

Entered as second-class matter October 11, 1923, at postoffice at Raleigh, N. C., under Act of March 3, 1879. Published Semi-monthly during the months of October, November, February, March, April and May; monthly during the months of September, December and January.

Thought for the day . . .

*I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care.*
—WHITTIER.

Guidance in our search for truth . . .

Assuming that each student is here with some purpose, some goal, we will readily admit that we need help in reaching these goals. It is among our faculty that we find the help that we need so badly. First, we need guidance in our attempt to increase knowledge, and our instructors are well-versed in their fields. The classes are small enough to develop individuals. The teachers do their full share in imparting knowledge to us. Then, too, we need help in solving personal problems. We seek to develop ourselves as interesting individuals who can meet ably almost any situation. Experience for such development is to be found at college for here we learn many things not in a book — how to dress, how to walk, how to talk, how to act, how to work, how to play, and more important, how to think. The faculty and the administration are anxious to assist us in learning these things. They understand how difficult the whole process sometimes is because they have once experienced it. The teachers may give you some of the most valuable friendships you will ever own. They may give you some of their very own experience to study. Accept their help.

Participation . . .

All work and no play creates a dull Jill. Of course, all play and no work makes a dumb Jill, but somewhere, there's an in-between mark. Most of us need to participate more in the sports activities. The physical education program has enough varied activities to induce any girl to play. There are sturdy games and strenuous tournaments, and then there are easier activities for the faint hearted. It is shameful to admit that two of the clauses did not have enough members to make a complete (11 girls) hockey team. And could not a few more of us have gone on the overnight riding trip to Crabtree? And how many of us will go out to dinner the night of the corn-husking? Of course, there's our ever-present obligation to our school to attend these functions. But better still is our desire to go and take part in the activities because they are enjoyable, wholesome, and worthwhile. Developing our bodies is as important as developing our minds.

On Hallowe'en

Are you excited about Halloween? Do you want to dress up in a sheet and scare your suitemate? You know how it began? Let's stop and review it then. Halloween is the evening before Allhallows or All Saints' Day, the 31st of October. Though some of us thought it to be a Christian holiday, the real Halloween antedates Christianity. It is a relic of a pagan ceremony and was connected with the belief that the lord of death called all who had died within the year to come back on that night—thus our carryover to ghosts' appearing at Halloween. Later the old pagan ritual was clothed with Roman material and now as a result we have parties and hayrides and apple "bobbings."
Today at Halloween we think of the customs we observe. We remember the great fun we had in planning costumes and wearing them on the long-looked-for night. We recall how frightened our parents and older friends seemed to be when we called on them in our groups. Then we think of jack-o'-lanterns, bobbing apples, and ghost stories told by the older boys and girls.
Why just remember the fun you used to have? Halloween this year can be fun. Haven't you any ideas as to how to celebrate? Why not plan a Halloween party for your suite? See who can bob apples the easiest or who can draw the best jack-o'-lantern. Get out that ol' game book and plan some fun! Halloween is the time for spirits. Well, let's plan to have the spirit of fellowship prevailing!
