STUDENT LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

Jane Middleton, President
Lorene Adams, Reporter

Since election year isn't very far off, the Student League of Women Voters chose as the topic for discussion at the last meeting the workings of the presidential election. Becky Ballentine told the group about party conventions and the nomination of the presidential candidate. Fran Thompson described the campaign for election and pointed out some of the political strategy used by the candidates. Lefty Pugh talked about the actual election and showed what happened in case of a tie and how the votes were cast.

At the next meeting, the club members are going to discuss some of the possible presidential candidates. The programs throughout the year will be designed to aid the members in better understanding the governmental system so that they might take a more intelligent part in local, state, and national affairs.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

Iva Hurst, President
Rosemary Dean, Reporter

The members of the Home Economics Club have been actively participating in club work recently. The president, Iva Hurst, has just been to a meeting of Province 3 of the College Department of the American Home Economics Association in Greenville, S. C. The emphasis of the meeting was the organization of better clubs. Representatives were present from North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama.

Club members have been preparing Christmas boxes to send through the World Festival Association to underprivileged teen-agers and children in Europe. This project is sponsored by Student Home Economics Clubs of America. Anyone who passed the Home Economics department Wednesday afternoon probably saw articles of clothing such as socks, gloves, toys, and candy being packed in six boxes in swirls of tissue paper and ribbon. Marianna Mizelle, who is chairman of the committee, now has the boxes ready to be shipped.

SOCIOLOGY CLUB

Katherine Wyatt, President
Barbara Francis, Reporter

The Sociology Club held its first meeting of the year in the Hut on October 21. The President, Katherine Wyatt, introduced the members of the faculty of the Sociology Department and gave a special welcome to the head of the Department, Dr. Clyde Parker. Dr. Parker responded with a brief talk in which he expressed his delight in the fact that there were two hundred and fifty-five students in the Sociology Department.

The program consisted of some of the students' telling about their summer experiences. Lois Harmon began the program by showing pictures and telling about her California trip, which included crossing the flooded Mississippi River and spending the night in a jail (on her own accord).

Nell Hunter spoke about her interesting Bible School work with the Mexicans. Elizabeth Taylor and Ronnie Holloman showed pictures of summer school at Carolina. Mildred Hoyle was a counselor for the Girl Scouts at Crabtree Creek with many pleasant experiences (that is if you like hiking, eating your own cooking, and having little sleep.)

JUNIORS TO HONOR LITTLE SISTER CLASS

Plans are underway by the Junior Class for a party in honor of their little sisters. The date and time is set for November 15, two weeks from tomorrow night, from 6:00-8:00 p.m. Further plans will be announced later.

OAK LEAVES, 1904-1947

"Be sure your shirt-waist is sufficiently bloused in order to accommodate cribbed biscuits, apples and cake."

In 1905 the second Oak Leaves appeared and was very like its older brother in content, but with a few additions. A "want ad, and don't want ad" column was published in which the cut system was offered for sale by the faculty.

The pages of the Oak Leaves are less yellowed as the years pass, and the styles and humor and ideas about what a college annual should be changed slightly with each passing year. The student body grew larger, and more photographs took the place of sketches, jokes, stories, and histories. Each year the Oak Leaves became a better annual for the students.

The editors of Oak Leaves of 1904 certainly succeeded in accomplishing the goal which they set in their purpose for preparing a college annual as their monument to the school. Surely the girls at Meredith today are glad that the Class of 1904 planted what has grown into the Oak Leaves, our worthy college annual.

the junior colleges to the senior colleges.

The meeting will begin with dinner in the dining hall. A general meeting of the entire group will follow. Later in the evening there will be group meetings of the representatives in their respective departments. On Saturday morning the departmental groups will meet again. The conference will end with a session at eleven o'clock, at which time the representatives from the respective departments will make summaries of findings and recommendations.

BOARDS OF VISITORS

In announcing the new advisory boards, President Davidson said, "During the past two years, Union College has reviewed her experience during a century and a half of pioneering in education since 1795."

The college faculty has worked out revised curricular requirements, establishing a new balance between major, general, and elective studies. Freshman and professional advisory programs for students have been reformulated and opportunities for character, social, and personality development have been strengthened through extra-curricular and fraternity activities.

"Union" President Davidson said, "is now calling on other educators and on the nation's outstanding employers of college graduates—our business men, government, industry, scientists, and service workers—to evaluate the result being accomplished and make definite suggestions for improvements."
