

THREE COMEDIES TO BE STAGED

Three one-act comedies will be presented on Saturday night, February 28, in the college auditorium. The plays will be given by the Freshman Class, the Phi Literary Society, and the Astro Literary Society. The Freshman Class play has been cast, and try-outs for the society plays began this week.

A one-act comedy by Harriett Ford entitled Are Men Superior? will be given by the Freshman Class. The play, which has a setting in a summer camp in the Adirondacks, will be directed by the class president, Marjorie Joyner, and Beverly Batchelor. Daphne Yelverton will play Mrs. Amos Livingston in the production, and Donna Walston will take the part of Mrs. Livingston's sister, Miss Susan Taylor. Stella Matthews will play the maid, Nelly, and Emma Lee Hough will take the part of Katrina, the German maid of all work. Martha Smith will be seen as Jane, the cook. Amusing situations develop in the plot before the question of the superiority of men is decided.

On the same night the Phi Society will present The Dabblers, a comedy by John Kirkpatrick, with a college setting. Casting for the play began earlier this week, and committee chairmen will be named soon. Louvene Jordan, Phi president, is in charge of the production.

Rooms in the dormitories and meals in the dining hall will be available at $14.50 for both men and women. A room reservation fee of $10.00, refundable until July 1, is required with the application.

Harry E. Cooper, professor of music; Dr. Benjamin F. Swalin, conductor, North Carolina Symphony Orchestra; and Miss Beatrice Donley, associate professor of music.
