

Plan Now for Summer Work

At our chapel service Tuesday morning Rev. James W. Ray, the Baptist Student director for North Carolina, told of summer opportunities that are sponsored by the denomination for students. Miss Anne Queen from the American Friends Service Committee in Greensboro told about Quaker work camps and seminars. Rev. William Rogers, an official of the North Carolina State College YMCA, told about YM and YW summer student projects.

If you did not get information or application blanks Tuesday, then see Miss Garner in her office. All applications must be in by February 1, so decide now to join one of the many summer projects.

CURTAIN TIME

The title for this play was taken from Song of Solomon, Chapter 11, verse 15.

As a special feature, Playbill, the official program for the Raleigh Little Theater boasts a most outstanding cover. Since it was felt that the art work should parallel the mood of the quote and Biblical theme, Jeff Hill, a local artist who has received national recognition for his work in woodcuts, accepted the challenge to undertake this project. After a great deal of research and 100 hours of work, a print was struck from the handcarved wooden block. The design shows three foxes, representing Regina, Ben, and Oscar Hubbard. The foxes are bordered by grapes, all hanging down since, as such, they symbolize a period or mood of evil or depression. The original print can be seen in the Little Theater lobby during the remaining presentations of The Little Foxes.

On February 10, the Carolina Playmakers will bring Inspector General to our campus. I don't have any details about the play, itself, but according to all reports, it is one of the best. Remember that we have voted to support this performance and make plans now to attend. It would be a nice treat for that boy who has been spending his allowance on you—perhaps an early valentine? At any rate, be sure you treat yourself and see Inspector General in our auditorium on February 10.
