

A. A. NEWS DIXIE CLASSIC

As all other leading newspapers in the state are full of basketball right now, we see no reason why our TWIG should be the exception. Naturally, the interest in sports over the holidays was centered around the Dixie Classic. For the first time in the Classic's history the Big Four met in the finals, and what finals they were! The first game Saturday night, December 31, saw Wake Forest play Duke in a thriller that ended with Duke's defeating Wake Forest, and thus ranking third place in the Classic's competition. But the game which all the fans looked to with expectation was the final between N. C. State, the nation's third-ranking team (A.P.), and fourth-ranked Carolina. Carolina just couldn't break State's winning streak; and believe me, State was "red hot"! Phil DiNardo, State's captain, with the help of one of the best teams North Carolina has seen in years, led State to an 82-60 win over the Tar Heels. It was the Wolf-pack's twenty-third straight win over a two-year period, which, by the way, was snapped by Duke this past Saturday night, and the eleventh straight win for the season. Shavlik and Molodet of State, Rosenbluth of Carolina, Davis of Wake Forest, and Belmont of Duke were chosen on the All-Tournament team. Shavlik, named the tournament's most valuable player, scored 50 points and was credited with 50 rebounds during the three-day competition.

PRINT AND PROPAGANDA

A great deal is to be learned from an ant. In spite of previous annoyance, I was dismayed to return from Christmas holidays to find that the ants in my bathtub were dead and gone. I remembered how they lined up militantly to drink in the stream made from the perpetual scattered drops leaking from the faucet. If I forgot to wash out the tub before my bath, I would always see a group of ferocious little ants swimming everywhere around me. At first I was terrified, but then I began to watch them more carefully. They always marched in lines as straight as a Mondrian painting. One warm Sunday, in order to protect my bag lunch, I put it on a chair and put the chair in six inches of water in the bathtub thus making a moat. The ants were appalled, but continued to circle round the edge of the water, planning a maneuver. There was no answer, however, so Joe, the leader, thought that only a Fabian approach could solve this problem. Immediately they turned away and went to seek a more profitable venture, namely the cookies on my dresser. I think ants are communistic, for the whole nation has equally divided much of my food. In a fiendish mood one morning I resolved to drown them all. When the water began to creep to the back of the tub some of the ants on the bottom managed to escape up the side. But the line of ants unaware of the danger continued to crawl into the tub. Luckily Joe was one of the refugees, and he situated himself one inch above the rising water and warned each ant as it met him. So the line swerved toward the top again. I was overcome with remorse at Joe's selflessness, then I destroyed him. But now as I gaze sadly into the tub, I miss that swarm of Huns, the ants.

WORK PROGRESSING ON NEW ARTS BUILDING

Architect's Drawing of New Arts Building

Meredith is currently engaged in a nine-year expansion program with a financial goal of $2,250,000. As outlined and authorized, it will provide for sorely needed renovations and additions in buildings and increase the resources available for current operations.

Presently under construction is the new arts building, as shown in the cut which will be Georgian in style, built of brick with limestone trim matching that of the other buildings on the campus. Note the interesting treatment of the south side which shows a framework of limestone and metal to take care of the many windows of the classrooms.

The building will accommodate all of the departments from the old arts buildings plus the department of psychology and philosophy. There will be an increase in the numbers of classrooms and an office for each instructor. Some of the new features are a large lecture room that will seat about ninety, one sound-proof room for language and speech work, and an art gallery, two large storage rooms, and a reception room with a kitchenette.

It is hoped that the new building will be ready for occupation by next September.

INSIDE, OUT

On Thursday, January 5, the Gestapo did something that, to the enslaved students, seemed very rash. An open forum was held in which the "mass" might offer suggestions for the Gestapo to take as projects. Of course, six guards in black with their police dogs stood at each side of the auditorium, ready to tear to pieces anyone having too radical an idea. Although the Gestapo surely will ignore any idiotic ideas which the "mass" might suggest, there were several brave students who offered projects (the execution of these few will be held on February 14 — the Gestapo are having a heart; several, in fact — and no admission is being charged).

The Gestapo S.G. and the Supreme Council for the Inquisition (Faculty Comm. to some) met recently to tackle the problem of

With This Ring . . .

By BARBARA SNIPES

Wedding bells will be ringing soon for some of the Meredith girls who returned from the holidays with that all important "rock" on their left hand. (I wonder if leap year had anything to do with it?)

Jody Gibson is engaged to Johnny Bivens from Wingate, N. C., who graduated from State in '55. Their marriage is planned for the summer if Johnny can persuade Uncle Sam to give him a leave; Johnny is stationed at Fort Richardson in Alaska. Jody was introduced to Johnny at the First Baptist Church here in Raleigh by Jo Ellen Williams.

Howard Harrelson gave Sarah Williams, a sophomore, her Christmas present, a beautiful diamond, on Christmas morning. These two have been dating for five long years, but this spring they will be married. After marriage, they plan to live in Tabor City, which is their home town.

Mary Lou Lee, a sophomore from Four Oaks, received a diamond from Leroy Parker, a student at State. No definite plans have been made.

A summer wedding is planned for Patricia Woodworth and Lynn Mann, a '55 graduate of Carolina. Pat, who met Lynn on a blind date in high school, has been dating him for six years.

Sharon Patterson and Jack Nivens, both from Charlotte, will be married in June as their plans are set now. Jack's best friend, whom Sharon had been dating, introduced the two.

Some of the other gals who received rings are: Joy Curtiss, Margaret Jo Jernigan, Ann Parr, Charlene Smith, Lynette Haislip, Carolyn Lowder, Caroline Miller, Martha Ann Roberts, Joan Madre, Lucy Atkinson, and Diana Jones.

. . . I Thee Wed

What mysterious element put an extra sparkle in the eyes and on the fingers of six Meredith girls during the holidays? What accounts for the tinkling of bells that they seem to hear now and then, the stray grains of rice in their suitcases, and the sudden flow of colored photographs to their rooms? It's really no mystery at all, as anyone can see, for these former happy misses are now ever happier wives. Wedding bells mingled with jingle bells for them this Christmas, and made it their merriest ever.

And who are the ones who decked their halls with white gladioli as well as holly? In case you missed their names as they were congratulated at dinner or haven't heard the facts, I will fill you in.

Betsy Tipett became Mrs. Jimmy Mallory on December 28 in Anniston, Alabama, the home town of both. Betsy is a senior and Jimmy is in Medical School at Duke. They are living in Durham.

Mickey Kimbrell Porter and Bill Porter were married in Charlotte on December 20. Mickey is from Charlotte and is a senior; Bill, a lieutenant in the Army, is from Mt. Airy, and is stationed at San Marcos, Texas.

Alice Cooper changed her name to Mrs. Bob Potter on Friday, the 30th of December. They are both from Raleigh, and are living in Raleigh. Alice is a junior and Bob is a senior at State.

Jeannette Saunders Lucas and Joe Lucas were married on December 20. Jeannette, a junior, is from Willow Springs, and Joe is a student at State and is from Raleigh. They are living in Raleigh.

Nancy Drake Savage and Bobby Savage were married in Washington D. C., on the 27th of December. Nancy is from Washington, and Bobby is from Willard, N. C. He is a 2nd lieutenant in the Army, and is stationed at Ft. Devon, Massachusetts.

Pat Loving became Mrs. Palmer Mills on December 1. Pat is from Danville, Virginia, and is a senior. Palmer is in the Navy and is stationed at Norfolk, Virginia.

"mass" loyalty to Stalag 14 (Meredith College to foreigners). There seems to be some confusion in the minds of the workers about the system on which the camp is run. The Honor System is the system, and there is no alternative. Those advocates of a personal honor system are saying, in essence, that honor is relative to personality; this writer, as she throws her police dog a foot on which to practice mangling, wonders if these same people have their own personal set of gods.

I have heard it said that "the pen is mightier than the Gestapo whip," so if anyone wishes to argue with the writer of this article, please write to INSIDE, OUT, in care of the TWIG.

Since there was no one to sponsor the civic music buses, a committee was appointed in chapel to attend to the matter. The committee stated that from now on, bus tickets will be sold a few days ahead; and those that do not get tickets can sign up, and if enough people sign, other bus will be ordered.

Basketball Reigns in Sports

More than likely, "The Angels" will never be invited to enter the Dixie Classic, but we do have a basketball team — or, at least, we're trying to have one. The Phis still practice on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 5 o'clock and Astros on Wednesdays and Fridays at the same hour. The tournament is coming up right after exams. The Phis are still leading in practice participation, so get out there, you Astros, and that still goes for you Phis, too! You never know, there may be a potential All-American on this very campus!

And here's something else that might interest you basketball fans. The A.A. is sponsoring a "free-throw" contest for anyone who would like to enter. You don't have to be an expert, though I do know that Sandra Stancil made 49 out of 50 the other week, just for kicks! So, come on out and practice any time the gym is free. To enter, submit your name to Rovilla Myers, second Brewer, and go to it!
