

Mr. Edwin K. Blanchard of the music department talks with Meredith's guest lecturer, Miss Lisa Sergio.

MEREDITH GIRLS WIN IN SHOW

"Walk . . . , trot . . . , canter your horses." Odd expressions? Yes, but these words are used daily by the five Meredith students who rode in the North Carolina championship horse show at the State Fair Arena, September 28-30.

Entering for Meredith were Mary Beth Hughes, Nancy Renfro, and Susan Hawkins, juniors; Jerry Lou Holbert, sophomore; and Lynn Abraham, freshman. Mary Beth placed fourth on "Silver Mac" in one of the largest pleasure classes in the show. In the same class, Susan Hawkins placed second on "Belle." Susan also won a first on "Ace-in-the-hole" in another pleasure class.

The show is said to be one of the South's largest and one of the biggest four indoor circuit shows in the East. Horses from seventeen states were shown. They came from as far north as New York, as far south as Florida, and as far west as California.

Mrs. Mary M. Edwards is the riding instructor at Meredith.

Student Teachers Make Preparations For Excitement, Worries, and Work

By SANDRA WALKER

Student teaching time is almost here again! In less than a month, some thirty-five prospective teachers from Meredith will assume their places in the schools of Raleigh and the surrounding areas. But before November 6, the date set for student teaching to begin, much time will be spent in observation in the various schools. Students are expected to be in the schools at least one afternoon a week, observing classes, teachers' meetings, club meetings, and other school activities. Almost all Meredith students have been placed and have had at least one conference with their supervising teachers.

Students in six different fields will be teaching in the secondary schools. They are Judy Goodwin, Marilyn Maner, Sandra Walker, Elizabeth Brannan, Mrs. D. R. Reveley, and Mary Holloway in English; Letitia Blount, Sybil Williams, and Theresa Brown in home economics; Kay Simpson in art; Delores Atkins in history; Julia Vining in French; and Anita Jones, Pat Walston, and Sandra Stanley in music.

Elementary student teachers include: Mary Peterson, Janice Patterson, Jean Weeks, Beverly Hensley, Cille Benton, Sara Leiby, Judy Bullard, Lucy Butler, Rachel Lowe, Kathy Roberts, Ann Taylor, Sue Holland, Jessie Matthews, Beverly White, Pat Leggett, Brenda Payne, Peggy Crutchfield, Henri Brunt, and Ruth Miller.

Beginning November 6, there will probably be more excitement, more bewilderment, more worries, and more work than many of these seniors have had in an entire lifetime! But the groans and sighs that you'll hear coming from the senior halls for the next few months will all be part of a most rewarding adventure—the experience of student teaching.

Lisa Sergio Challenges Students To Preserve Their Knowledge

By MARCIA DAVIS

Lisa Sergio, a startling figure representing the search for a better America, spent two days on the Meredith campus last week. Miss Sergio, who is now on a complete tour of the Southeastern United States Colleges, spoke at the required lecture and again in chapel on the attitude of Americans toward their country.

During an interview, she repeated her desire to see a change of heart in Americans. She feels very strongly that we as Americans have too much of a "me for me, you for you" way of life. She emphatically pointed out that Americans must serve a common cause and must begin to maintain the earlier established high standards of the country.

When asked how this change of attitude and service of a common cause could be practiced by a college student, she smiled and said, "You think you have a right to go to college. You don't; it's a privilege." She pointed out that a college education in the United States is a social manhunt for most girls. They spend untold hours on their faces, hair, and clothes. Yet none seem to care about preserving what goes into the mind for any greater length of time than from that point at which it enters until that second point at which it leaves to be placed on an examination paper.

Miss Sergio presented these thoughts in both her lecture and her chapel speech and requested that they be restated in the TWIG in the hopes that one or perhaps two girls at Meredith would care enough to listen.

AA SPONSORS TENNIS EXHIBITION

By PEGGY CRUTCHFIELD

A combination of skill and compliments makes a faculty-student tennis match a real treat. On Friday, September 29, the Athletic Association sponsored a mixed doubles tennis match.

Participating in the match were, Mrs. Jay Massey, physical education instructor, and "Pedunk" Atkins versus Mr. Edwin Blanchard of the music department and Nickie Childrey. The score was 6-1 in favor of Mr. Blanchard and Nickie.

The score itself was of minor interest. The audience was instructed by Mr. Blanchard as to the proper etiquette for tennis spectators. "Always applaud at aces," he said. Mr. Blanchard's powerful serve was a major factor in the victory of his team.

The second match was purely an impromptu affair. During the first match Mr. Bernard Cochran of the religion department had been acting as scorekeeper and referee. Meanwhile Mrs. Helena Allen of the physical education department drove up in her car to watch. After a bit of friendly persuasion, the four members of the faculty agreed to play. Mr. Blanchard and Mrs. Massey opposed Mrs. Allen and Mr. Cochran.

Mr. Blanchard introduced the players. Mr. Cochran was introduced as the "Dark Duke." The score was "sung" during the game by Mr. Blanchard. Mrs. Massey said, "If he sings they leave; if he plays tennis they will stay."

After viewing this match one is convinced that tennis is truly a gentleman's game. Never have compliments so adorned a tennis court. Mrs. Allen informed Mrs. Massey and Mr. Blanchard that she and Mr. Cochran were changing their strategy from a previous game. At this point she missed a shot and Mr. Blanchard's reply was, "I like that change." Later in the game Mrs. Allen asked Mr. Cochran what she was doing wrong in her shot. "I think you're congratulating them while you hit," replied Mr. Cochran.

The results of this match was a score of 6-1 in favor of Mrs. Massey and Mr. Blanchard. The A.A. expresses its appreciation to all who came out for the match. To our participating faculty members the A.A. is especially grateful.
