Archie Speaks Founders' Day; Guests Invited

Dr. William Archie, Chairman of the Board of Higher Education for North Carolina and a long-time friend of Dr. Carlyle Campbell was guest speaker for the annual Founders' Day observance. He spoke about the importance of a liberal arts education and what such involves.

First Commemoration in 1909

The annual observance dates back to 1909 when the first guest speaker was Henry Louis Smith, then president of the University of Virginia. The chorus under the direction of Beatrice Donley performed for this occasion with special music. They also sang "Jerusalem, The Golden" extemporaneously at Dr. Archie's request.

Afternoon Reception

From four-thirty to six o'clock, visitors, seniors, members of the faculty and administration were honored by a formal reception held in the Blue Parlor in Johnson Hall.

Coffer, Crane Publish Work On Attitudes

Mr. Henry Coffer, professor of religion at Meredith, in connection with Dr. William E. Crane, counseling pastor at the Second Presbyterian Church in Knoxville, Tennessee, has finished a Religious Attitudes Inventory which will be published around the end of the year. Dr. Gellalo McHugh, professor of psychology at Duke University and a family life expert who has previously published counseling helps, served as the psychological advisor.

This Religious Attitudes Inventory is designed as a counseling aid to ministers and other religious counselors. It is not a test, but a device to help the counselor find the areas in which the person wants or needs counseling.

It should also help the counselor express his beliefs and perhaps stimulate him to reach beliefs in previously unexamined areas.

It is composed of 107 items that span the general attitudes toward religion, reduced from some 3,000 to 5,000 statements obtained through questionnaires from college students, church congregations, and other such groups. The work is accompanied by a manual which explains the history of the inventory and suggests some helps in using the inventory for counseling.

Meredith Helped in Revision

While this inventory was being worked into final form, it was given to freshmen and upperclassmen here at Meredith. Their responses were useful to the authors in their revision. It has also been given by the psychology department at the University of Tennessee.

Other than pastoral counseling, this inventory could be used in marriage counseling to help two people discover for themselves their attitudes toward religion, in church groups to stimulate discussion, in a college religion department to discover students' attitudes, and in a church congregation to enable the minister to find areas for sermon coverage.

Seniors and Administration Choose 12 for Who's Who

Each year THE TWIG is privileged to announce the selections for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. Until this time the names of the girls remain secret.

Several seniors are elected to membership in Who's Who. The number of nominations each college and university may present is based upon a quota which is determined by enrollment at the institution. The seniors elected all display excellence and sincerity in scholarship, leadership, participation in extracurricular and academic activities, citizenship, service to the school, and promise of future usefulness. Twelve Meredith seniors, displaying these qualities, were elected to membership in Who's Who for this year.

Carol Andrews, an English and education major from Elizabethtown, is the editor of THE TWIG. She has served as counselor and member of the judicial board.

Linda Arlege, an elementary education major from Henderson, is editor of the Oak Leaves. In previous years she has served on the annual staff.

Nell Cox, an English major is the president of the senior class and president of the Silver Shield. Coming from Burlington, Nell has also served as freshman counselor.

Donna Dull, a math major from Winston-Salem, serves as chairman of the legislative board. In past years she has served as hall proctor and president of her freshman class. This year Donna compiled the Hall Proctor Handbook.

Robin Gentry, a sophomore transfer, is an elementary education major from Winston-Salem. She now serves as chief counselor and was voted "Best Dorm Student." In previous years she served as freshman counselor and representative to the judicial board.

Martha House, president of the Athletic Association, is a math major from Monroe. She has previously served on the A.A. board.

Nileen Hunt, a Raleigh resident, is a math major. A member of Kappa Nu Sigma, Nileen is editor of the "Acorn" and has served as hall proctor.

Betty Ipock, a native of New Bern, now serves as president of student government at Meredith. Betty is a history major, a member of Silver Shield, and has recently been voted "Miss Meredith." She has previously served as counselor and as hall proctor.

Carol May, a math major from Charlotte, is a member of Kappa Nu Sigma. A previous president of the French club, Carol has been voted "Most Intellectual" by her classmates.

Laura Penny, chairman of the judicial board and member of Silver Shield, is a native of Kenansville. A biology major, Laura has served as freshman counselor and secretary to the judicial board.

Anne Poole, president of the Meredith Christian Association, is an English major from Kinston. Voted "Most Likely to Succeed," Ann has served as freshman counselor.

Margaret Simmons, a music major from Wadesboro, is chairman of the student activities board. Margaret, who plays for the chorus and ensemble, was voted "Most Talented," by her class.

UNC-R Frank Thompson Theatre Presents Jean Anouilh's Play 'Antigone' November 7-8

For its premiere performance, the Thompson Theatre at UNC-R has chosen ANTIGONE by Jean Anouilh.

The play will run for three consecutive weekends, November 7-8, 14-16 and 19-21 at 8:00 p.m.

The original story is Greek mythology, and Sophocles wrote his play over 2,000 years ago, paralleling a Greek revolution. Anouilh wrote his play under the stress and indignity of the German Occupation of France in 1943. Even though the play had to pass German censorship, Anouilh ingeniously wove the story of ANTIGONE, the martyr who refused to agree with a way of life in which she was promised happiness, provided that she would agree not to intervene in anything that did not concern her material existence, thus making her the symbol for all Frenchmen rejecting the German "New Order" with its promise of prosperity, provided the French people agreed to surrender their spiritual independence. The story is timeless, for it is not just about dictatorship and religious belief, but about man's basic inability to understand and communicate with his fellow man.

The play, under the direction of Charles Stilwill, has modern setting and costumes and will be played in three-quarter round in the Thompson flexible theatre. The cast includes several veterans in theatre and talented newcomers. Corrine Newman, cast in the title role of ANTIGONE, has participated in community theatre for many years in starring roles. Charles Stilwill, in addition to directing, will play the Chorus and has degrees in dramatic art from the Pasadena Playhouse and New York University. Lloyd Kay, a Presbyterian minister from Benson, creates Creon and brings experience from the Raleigh Little Theatre and from productions in Miami, Florida. Gurdine Bliss, who has been active in theatre all over the southeast, including the Carolina Playmakers, appears as the Nurse; Lloyd Harmon, electrical engineering student at UNC-R, plays Haemon; Julie Lassiter, appearing as Ismene, is playing the role for the second time, having created the role last year as a student at Enloe High School. The three Guards will be portrayed by Simon Parker, a math teacher at Broughton High School; Craig Givens, State student in landscape architecture; and Eugene Seals, State freshman in nuclear engineering. Charles Tant, Chief Photographer at WRAL-TV, will appear as the messenger; Anne White, librarian at Leroy Martin Junior High School, appears as Eurydice. A talented thirteen-year-old, Jimmy Williams of Raleigh, portrays the Page.

Tickets will be available one week before performance at the Information Center, Erdahl-Cloyd Union and at Thompson Theatre. Admission prices will be $.50 for students and $2.50 for adults.

McAllister Leads Language Teachers Of North Carolina

Dr. Quentin O. McAllister, head of the Meredith College foreign language department, has been named president of the Baptist Foreign Language Teachers in North Carolina.

Dr. McAllister is also an officer in the South Atlantic Modern Language Association and will help with the agenda as the group meets for its 34th annual convention November 12-14 at Durham.

He was chosen for his latest honor during the October 9 meeting of the foreign language department of the seven N. C. Baptist colleges at Wake Forest College, Winston- (Continued on page 5)
