Murray Explains N. C. Fund, Discusses War on Poverty

A staff member of the North Carolina Fund addressed the Sociology Club on Wednesday, February 22. Speaking at the 7:00 meeting, Mr. John E. Murray discussed the work of the Fund and other agencies in North Carolina's war on poverty.

In talking about the controversial issue of poverty, Murray stressed that most poor people are not lazy individuals who are concerned only with receiving government handouts. From his experience with poverty, Murray believes that people who are born into poverty receive inadequate educations and are therefore unequipped to find jobs which would enable them to rise above poverty.

Murray explained that the federal government, in its anti-poverty program, does not give "handouts" to the poor. Instead, it tries to provide them with the kind of education and job training which will prepare them to earn their own way in the world.

Since February of 1966, Murray has been on a speaking tour of North Carolina, providing information to the public about the anti-

Dr. Lemmon Writes Book on Tarheels' Role in World War I

Dr. Sarah Lemmon, chairman of the department of history and political science, has recently completed her book, North Carolina's Role in the First World War. Published by the North Carolina Department of Archives and History, Dr. Lemmon's book was edited by Mrs. Memory F. Mitchell, director of the Archives Division of Publications and a former student of Dr. Lemmon at Meredith.

This work is a companion volume to Dr. Lemmon's book, North Carolina's Role in World War II, which was published in 1964.

The first chapters of the book deal with the outbreak of the war in Europe and how it spread to involve the United States. The remaining chapters treat specific areas of this state's reluctant preparation for the war and the later enthusiasm for the war effort which arose in the state after America's entrance in World War I.

Excerpts from diaries and letters and reprints of original pictures add interest and a personal touch to the book. Dr. Lemmon began research for the work about a year ago, and most of the primary research was done here in Raleigh at the State Archives.

The 100-page book may be obtained from the Department of Archives and History.

poverty program in North Carolina.

He also explains the role of the North Carolina Fund, a private corporation which operates on the funds from the Ford, Babcock, and Reynolds foundations.

A native of Roanoke Rapids, North Carolina, Murray is a former

Visiting Sociologists to Speak At Annual Alumnae Seminar

The twenty-fifth annual Alumnae Seminar to be held March 18 on the Meredith campus will be sponsored by the sociology department.

"Man: Our Challenge and Our Response" will be the theme of the day's activities. Three men appearing here under the auspices of the Visiting Scientist Program of American Sociological Association and six Meredith alumnae who are engaged in the field of sociology will lead the Saturday sessions.

Dr. Edward A. Tiryakian of Duke University will be on campus a day early to speak to sociology majors. His speech to the alumnae will concern "Sociology: Whence and Whither?"

Dr. George L. Maddox, also of Duke University, will discuss "Understanding Some Normal Troubles: Teenage Drinking, Obesity, and Growing Old." Dr. Robert Neal Wilson of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will discuss "Society and Literature."

Alumnae who will lead a discussion on "Sociology at Work" are: Mrs. Charles N. Anderson (Mary Lee Wethington, '46), acting supervisor of Child Welfare Services of the Wake County Department of Public Welfare; Mrs. Paul Everhart (Bernice Limer, '53), caseworker with the Associated Family and Child Service Agency of Winston-Salem; Mrs. William H. Farrior (Christine Bordeaux, '48), director of Martin County Community Action Program of Williamston; Mrs. Robert O. Stephens (Virginia Jones, '51), instructor in the Department of Sociology and Anthropology at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro; Miss Sarah Elizabeth Thomas ('53), senior psychiatric social worker at Jefferson Medical College Hospital in Philadelphia; and Miss Leah Rose Williams ('63), instructor in psychiatric social work with Duke Medical School.

Students are invited to attend the Saturday sessions.
