Art Club "Thrills" Students With Bargains In Art Show

By Abigail Warren

"Buy your Cheap Thrills" was the calling card for the outdoor art show on Meredith's library veranda last Wednesday afternoon from 1-5. The show, a project of the art club was a success in spite of many misgivings. Rained out on Tuesday, the show was reassembled the next morning for the afternoon occasion.

President of the art club, Sarah Holden, said, "It went off a lot better than I thought — to be the first one we ever held." The other members agreed.

There was some disappointment that more people did not contribute since art work was accepted from anyone on campus who wished to present it. The art club offered to split the profit on an art piece with the donor if that was desired. Nevertheless, the members are already making plans for a bigger and better show next year.

Refreshments with a springtime accent were served to compliment the setting and revive participants during the hot afternoon.

Approximately $43 was taken in from the sale. Reflecting the feelings of the club and contributors, Sarah said, "I thought the prices on the works were very reasonable."

She was right. Seldom can one find art of any kind for the prices offered here. The show lived up to its name, "Cheap Thrills."

. . . Others got their thrills by just browsing.

May Day Impressions

was so scared. Oh, I would never make it. The hands of the clock were quickly approaching eight o'clock. Then the phone rang, and the receptionist said that I had a guest. "Oh, no. He's here." I took one last look in the mirror. Black knee boots, short cut-off jeans and a white old shirt. If only my mother could see me now.

I walked out. My date came up to me and said he was ready. We walked to the parking lot, but he took me past all the cars and headed toward a motorcycle. He gave me a helmet; I put it on and climbed on the cycle. We headed for Fraternity Row. So this is college life. But oddly enough I had fun.

That night after everyone got in the Freshmen gave us a party. They had little skits all about college life: blind dates, phone calls, fraternity parties, studying. Then Jane closed it with a prayer. As I got in bed, I realized that college was what the girls made it. They made me feel that I belonged. I could hardly wait until next fall.

Annual May Day Horse Show Is Held

Along with the many other May Day festivities, Meredith held its annual May Day Horse Show from 10 a.m. until 12 noon at the Meredith Stables. Both Meredith Students and other equitation students from the Raleigh area participated. Mr. Joe Brooks judged the show.

The Hunt Seat classes were divided into Basic and Advanced. The Basic Division was judged on the rider's ability to manage her horse on the flat. The winners were: 1st — Kathy Withers on Whodunit, 2nd — Gail Knapp on Scotch Mist, 3rd — Carolyn Lewis on Hara.

The Advanced Division was judged on the rider's ability to ride her horse over jumps which were 3 feet 3 inches high. The winners were: 1st — Marsha McCutchen on Whodunit, 2nd — Carolyn Lewis on Scotch Mist, 3rd — Ann Lunday on Fringe Benefit.

Cathy Lipsack won the Salle Seat Division, which was judged on the rider's ability to work a saddle horse.
