Senior Class rolls to big victory as class of '75 takes second and Frosh settle for third

by Allyn Vogel

Seniors Woody Dicus, Meg Pruette and Gloria Smith led their class to a Cornhuskin' victory last week. Their presentation of "Women in History" brought such celebrities as Billie Jean King, Cleopatra, Tricia Nixon Cox (Daddy's Innocent), and Martha Washington. Their interpretation of history from the viewpoint of women participants won the seniors their victory in the parade portion of the Cornhuskin' competitions. The freshmen focusing on Dogpatch, the setting of L'il Abner, finished second in parade. The sophomores chose to be intellectual with their presentations based on Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. Their narration by Chaucer (Rosemary Stankwyth) and Dean Burreis (Pam Culp) got third place.

Ruth Anne Stephenson presented the winning senior tale, "Femelia Womenaie". The juniors placed second and the sophomores third with their tales told by inanimate objects. The junior victrola told of Meredith life and music in the 50's, while the sleazy Wife of Bath's locket told of her mistress's date with the "perfect man.. John E. Weems."

The seniors won hog calling by summoning the male chauvinists to Noah's ark (by twos?). The juniors won second place with their serenade to "Pig Angel". The sophomores' pigs got third place with their can-can dance to the accompaniment of "sui, sui".

The big-mouthed juniors bit their way through soggy apples and won the apple bobbing event. The sophomores crunched to a second place and the freshmen a third.

The Meredith religion department led the faculty to a win in the Cornhuskin' event, with Allen Page and Bernie Cochran ripping off the husks in record time. The freshmen placed second and the seniors third after a few disqualification problems with the other two classes.

The faculty demonstrated their "meanness" and nastiness and professed that they were showing their real selves in their witch and ghou costumes. Their song, a repeat from last year was again a crowd-pleaser.
