Conference aids leaders

by Kristle Beattle
"Assertive Training", "Peer Counseling" and "Sex Counseling" were just a few of the topics covered in the recent leadership conference held at Meredith, August 17-19. The conference, an annual event, are held to better prepare hall proctors, dorm presidents, organizational presidents, and other students in key positions for their jobs in the coming year.

Dr. Merna Dee Galassi, Coordinator of Special Programs, Student Activities, and Developmental Counseling, opened the conferences on the evening of the 17th. Following the introductions made by Dr. Galassi and Dean Joyce White, Dr. Sandra C. Thomas spoke on "Meredith: Its Direction and Purpose". Dr. Thomas is the Vice President for Student Development.

The conferences continued on Wednesday, with a general session in which Ms. Corinne Houpt and Dr. Donald Gehring spoke of the law and its effect on Meredith as an institution of private higher education. Dr. Gehring is the Dean of Student Development at Mars Hill College while Ms. Houpt serves as the Assistant University Counsel at Duke University.

Other items on the agenda for the day included a view from Phyllis Smith, SGA president, a planning and goal assessment session led by Ms. Jane Sparks, resident advisor, and a Judicial Board planning session where various Honor Code changes were discussed. The day's conferences were concluded by Dr. Galassi as she spoke on the roles the leaders would play in the next nine months.

On the final day of the conferences the students had a choice about which lecture they would attend. Speakers at this session included Mr. Lee Grier, Director of the Division of Human Relations, N.C. Department of Public Instruction, Mr. Odell Watson, Assistant Director and Ms. Phyllis Ethridge, Consultant, Division of Human Relations.

Also speaking during the conferences were Mr. Larry Williams, campus minister, Ms. Elizabeth Wilson, Counselor, and Ms. Ann Wilson, staff member in the area of Career Services at Meredith.

Dr. Galassi explains that the conferences aided the campus leaders by instructing them in ways to handle people and problems they would encounter, and by helping them to plan the paths to take to accomplish their goals.

Many of those attending the conferences felt them to be beneficial. The sessions allowed the leaders to meet various people they would be working with throughout the year and served as an effective reminder of their responsibilities.

Strong points of the conferences included the outside speakers because of the new ideas they brought. Also, the choice given to the students of which lecture they would attend was good because it avoided repetition for those who had attended previous conferences.
