Opportunities in the Navy

The Naval Officer Candidate School located in the beautiful seacoast town of Newport, R.I., graduated a class of 155 in October of 1979 after four months of intensive training. Heading that class was a woman, a graduate of Hunter College with a degree in English. The student finishing second was a computer science major from MIT. Many graduates of the October class were given a choice of places for their next assignments and were sent to places like San Diego; Bermuda; the Philippines; Sicily; Virginia Beach; Washington; D.C.; Pensacola, Florida; Jacksonville, Florida; Puerto Rico; Alaska; Guantanamo Bay and London. Many of the graduates, however, chose to remain in Newport.

If you are interested in learning more about women in military service, drop by the Office of Career Services. An interesting article from The Times magazine, January 14, 1980, "What Happens When The Boss is a Woman," discusses some of the problems faced by women moving up through the military ranks and how these problems were handled. Also available is a list of all the training assignments of the December, 1980, class and a realistic article, describing the difficult part as well as the exciting part of the training period.

Anti-War group registering

by Larry Spears, Information Director
The Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors has announced that they are registering individuals who are opposed to participation in the military.

Larry Spears, director of CCCO's Youth and Conscientious Objection Campaign, says, "The need for young people to go on record as conscientious objectors to war has never been greater than it is today."

According to Spears, "There is a very real possibility that Congress will pass a bill, after the 1980 elections, requiring the mandatory registration of young people with Selective Service. Young Americans should start thinking about whether they could participate in the military."

According to Betty Alexander, a National Selective Service spokesperson in Washington, the cards could carry a lot of weight in convincing a draft board of objector's sincerity. "It sounds like a rational approach," she said. "It shows the applicant is not experiencing a late crystallization of beliefs."

"They (CCCO) are a very organized group. They know a statement made at this time would carry a lot of weight. If the draft is reinstated and a young man can prove he went on record in a time when he was not in danger of going to war, then it might have some influence on his board."

"The usefulness of this card," says Spears, "is that it provides a record of an individual's opposition to war and the military. Under current Selective Service regulations, an individual who is called up for active duty will have only 10 days to put together his or her CO claim. This CO card will help demonstrate to the military the thousands of young people who will not serve in the military even if the nation returns to the draft."

CCCO was founded in 1948 as the Central Committee for Conscientious Objectors and is a national agency counseling young Americans facing the prospect of military service. National Office address, P.O. Box 15796, Philadelphia, Pa. 19103. Telephone 215-568-7971.
