Senate correspondent to address convocation

On Monday, October 6, at 10:00 a.m., Fall Convocation will be held in Jones Auditorium. Featured speaker, Linda Wertheimer, will address the audience on "Images for Politicians."

Linda Wertheimer became a principal figure in the historic live broadcasts from the U.S. Senate gallery when National Public Radio opened its microphones on the Senate debate on the Panama Canal treaties. For the past six years, Wertheimer's now familiar voice has anchored National Public Radio's coverage of congressional hearings, political conventions and election night returns. She is the vice chairman of the Congressional Radio and Television Correspondents Association.

Ms. Wertheimer graduated from Wellesley in 1965 and following graduation worked for the British Broadcasting Company in London as a production assistant on "Outlook," "The World Today" and "Commentary." She returned to the United States in 1968 and worked for WCBS radio in New York City producing "back of the book" features for the station's all-news format.

As a legislative and political reporter, Ms. Wertheimer is optimistic about the role of public radio in restoring the public's confidence in its government and its leaders. "If we can broadcast House and Senate debates on important issues, we can help to bridge a gap between the people and their government. I think drawing back the curtain on the Congress is one of the most important things National Public Radio can do... and we are the only radio organization that can afford to do it."

Linda Wertheimer, Congressional Correspondent for the historic live coverage of Senate debate on the Panama Canal Treaties, will speak at Fall Convocation.

Meredith hosts professors

by Heidi Hill

This year at Meredith we will have several visiting professors teaching special courses.

The Physical Education Department has already hosted John and Jennifer Arnold. Both have taught, choreographed, and performed throughout the country. They are presently choreographing for the Carolina Dancers at the University of N.C.

The P.E. department has another program coming up September 29 - October 10, and the instructor is Ambrose Brazelton. Mr. Brazelton is a master teacher in the area of rhythm and group motivation. He is retired as Supervisor of Elementary and Physical Education for the Ohio Dept. of Education and previously lectured at the University of Akron.

The Department of Education has arranged to have Dr. Betty Bullard teach Non-western Culture. Her program starts September 29 and runs through October 10.

Dr. Bullard is currently Director of Education for The Asia Society, Inc., N.Y., N.Y. She has received the N.C. Award for Outstanding Educator and has a long list of publications to her credit. She will present a lecture in Cate Auditorium on Friday, October 3, at 10:00.

The Department of History and Political Science will have Mr. Max Krebs as its guest. He is the former ambassador to Guyana and renowned in the field of foreign service and very interested in lecturing on Latin American affairs. This course is from Jan. 15 through Feb. 16.

The Education Department has a program on Ethnic Relations from Jan. 14 through March 6. The instructor is Dr. Dudley E. Flood, who is the current Assistant State Superintendent of Student Services with the N.C. Dept. of Public Instruction. Among his many awards and honors received are Outstanding Leadership in N.C. Education, Distinguished Professor, and Boss of the Year.

The Department of Home Economics will host Ms. Mary Beth Kuester January 26-30. The course is on consumerism. She writes and moderates a periodic consumer information program for state TV stations and has taught at Mary Mount College in Milwaukee and University of Wisconsin, Madison.

The Psychology Department has invited Dr. Peter S. Fernald to teach a course in clinical Psychology March 15-28. Dr. Fernald currently teaches at the University of New Hampshire and also maintains a private practice through Psychotherapy Associates in Rochester, NH. He has an extensive background in Rogerian psychology and has been intimately associated with the California movement in humanistic psychology.

In the Spring semester, the Biology Department is hosting Dr. Thomas L. Quay who will be teaching Ornithology. He is recently retired from the faculty of N.C. State University, having been a professor of Zoology and Ecology there since 1948.

Scholarship opportunities offered

by Susan McDonough

The Harry S. Truman Scholarship is a permanent educational scholarship established by Congress as the official Federal Memorial to honor the 33rd President of the United States.

It was created in 1977 and is designed to provide opportunities for outstanding students to prepare for careers in government service.

Its main objective is to recognize President Truman's high regard for public trust, his lively exercise of political talents, his broad knowledge and understanding of the American political system and his desire to enhance educational opportunities for young people.

The main requirement is that the entrants must be in an undergraduate program which will permit admission to a graduate program leading to government service. Students also must be currently in their sophomore year, have a B average, and be in the top quarter of the class.

Each school nominates one candidate who will go on to the next level of competition. There will be one winner from each of the fifty states plus 26 at-large winners.

The winners can receive up to $5,000 a year to be applied towards their junior and senior years of undergraduate study and the first two years of graduate study.

Entry deadline is December 1. All interested sophomores should see Dr. Stewart in 112 Joyner.
