Celia Horne

Meredith senior Queen of Tobaccoland

by Judy Chandler

"It was the most wonderful week of my life!" says Meredith Senior Celia Horne of the recent Tobacco Festival in Richmond, Virginia. Miss Horne was crowned 1982 Queen of Tobaccoland at halftime of the Tobacco Bowl football game between the University of Richmond and East Carolina on Saturday, October 10. That evening, she reigned over the Grand Ball at the John Marshall Hotel.

Miss Horne and seventeen other Tobacco Princesses from four tobacco producing states attended luncheons, teas, interviews, fashion shows and receptions during the four day competition. Celia was awarded first place in the talent competition for her spunky rendition of the song and dance number 'Honeybun' from the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical "South Pacific". She later repeated her performance a capella while attending a concert when the "concert" didn't show up.

The prize that Miss Horne seems to be most proud of is a three piece set of luggage. "It's beautiful," she exclaims. Along with the luggage, Celia received $2500 cash, a $125 talent award, and numerous silver bowls and cups. Her sponsors, Peoples Bank and Trust and the Rocky Mount Board of Trade, gave her a heart-shaped diamond ring.

As Queen of Tobaccoland, Miss Horne will represent Philip Morris, Inc. at the Kentucky Derby and the United States Tobacco Industry at Greenbriar resort. She will also travel to the Canadian Tobacco Festival and tour the twenty-two tobacco producing states in the U.S.

The most outstanding event of the Festival for Miss Horne was the illuminated parade on Friday evening. She waved for three hours from a Honda Prelude to the children who lined the streets. "I loved it," she smiled. "One little girl even asked for my autograph. I was so excited."

Upon returning to Third Barefoot late Sunday evening, Celia was greeted by a group of excited friends and a door decorated in true Meredith fashion. The doorway was adorned with bows and steamers of toilet paper and plastered with cigarette advertisements clipped from magazines.

Miss Horne would like to thank everyone at Meredith College for their support throughout her reign as Queen of Tobaccoland.

North Carolina Apple Queen

Lesa Rene Seay, a senior here at Meredith, is the reigning 1981 North Carolina Apple Queen. Lesa was crowned queen Thursday August 27, 1981 by the retiring Apple Queen, Gayle Miller of Hendersonville.

Lesa rode in the King Apple Parade on September 7.

Riding in parades is only part of her duties as Apple Queen. She will represent Henderson County apple industry at various events throughout North Carolina in the coming year.

Lesa was chosen from a field of fifteen contestants from all over North Carolina.

After Lesa was chosen as queen, she and her court were honored at the Apple Festival Coronation Ball on Saturday, August 29.

Lesa is majoring in business administration here at Meredith. She is a member of the Tomorrow's Business Women's Club; second vice president of the American Society of Personnel Administration; a member of the business department's Student Advisory Board; a member of Delta Mu Delta, the national honor society for business majors; a member of Psi Chi, the national honor society for psychology majors and minors; secretary of the Senior Class of 1982; and a little Sister of the Sigma Chi Fraternity.

If you have won a contest or award of some sort and would like to have it published in the TWIG, submit a written article and picture to Lori Howell in Room 215 Potat. We will publish on a "first come first serve" basis.

Interest

relative price of energy in 1974.

There is no reason for us to be afraid of higher prices for money. We can, and will, adjust to them by shifting economic resources, in the same way we have adjusted to higher energy prices. That is what markets do best. The U. S., unfortunately, inflicted many injuries on itself when its leaders refused to face up to the higher cost of fuel. Politicians and the public, with their morbid fear of high interest, may repeat the mistake.
