Meredith Health Fair Sparks Awareness

by Linda Sellers

Delores Jackson was surprised.

"I came in at 10 and it was just one person after another. It's been very busy all day."

Ms. Jackson was one of the many community volunteers who contributed their services April 23 to the Meredith Health Fair, which was co-sponsored by WRAL-TV.

Ms. Jackson, who performed anemia testing, volunteered because she is anemic herself. "I feel a lot of people avoid medical testing because of expense. I would come here myself because of the great variety of tests."

Screenings were given in height, weight, podiatry, blood pressure, vision, anemia, and blood chemistry analysis. There was also a demonstration of CPR, a puppet show, and an exhibit on nutrition.

Many Meredith students attended the fair. One Meredith student, Martha King, reflected, "I liked that they told you if you were overweight or underweight for your size."

To visit the screening booths was an easy procedure. Visitors filled out a form on their medical history and turned a test result form in before leaving so that their results could be sent in the mail.

According to Ms. Helena Allen, campus site coordinator for the fair, things went smoothly during the day. "The health fair would not work without so many contributors and volunteers," she commented.

Exhibitors at the fair included Diet Center, Flowers by Lorraine, Fallons Florist, Logan's, PYA Monarch Foods, McDonald's, Meredith College, the Meredith Psychology Club, and the Meredith Home Economics Club.

Other exhibitors were N.C. Department of Human Resources, UNC-Chapel Hill School of Nursing, Wake County Board of Education, Wake County Drug and Alcohol Abuse Center, Wake County Pharmaceutical Society, Weight Watchers, YMCA of Wake County, Balloons Unlimited, Winn-Dixie, and A & P.

WRAL-TV sponsored many other community fairs in conjunction with Health Fair Week, April 17-24.

The TWIG would like to thank all students who volunteered their time to the fair. These include Kim Elliott, Michelle Gay, Leigh Anne Foil, Lori Naylor, Kelly Sullivan, Sandra Vail, Betsy Dawkins, Cindy Bross, Kim McKee, Nancy Mullinax, Pam Bird, Kim Denton, Kelly Efrid, and Suzanne Harrell.

Also, Tina Vincent, Kim Cozart, Lori Jackson, Karen Hill, Shepard Kimbrell, LuAnne Riggs, Tomi Mutschler, Lynda Wilson, Laura Cave, Camille Stuckey, Robin Rowe, Kimberly Koranda, Bonna Redding, Marie Blackman, Sarah Shugart, and Stuart Looney.

On Thursday, April 22, the steeple was placed on top of the Christina Brown and Seby Brown Jones Chapel. The steeple was built by Campbellsville Industries, Inc. of Campbellsville, Ky. [Norton photo]

Albert Long Speaks

by Karen Ann Carlton

How many people listen to the lyrics of their favorite songs - I mean really listen? Chances are that those people who were at MCA's Spring Forum on Tuesday night, April 20, pay better attention to their music now. Albert Long spoke on the demonic overtones present in some rock music.

Long graduated from the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill in 1957 with athletic letters in four sports. A professional speaker, he travels around doing various types of seminars. For the past eight months he has been researching the subject of Satanism as portrayed in rock music.

After a brief introduction of himself, Long said, "I am scared." He is scared because these so-called harmless songs which concentrate on violence and sexual perversion, among other things, are taking this country by storm and no one seems to care. He has decided that it is his job to care, and he intends to fight both the music itself and the people's attitudes toward it. Long stresses the fact that he is not leading a crusade to get people to burn all of their albums. His purpose is merely to expose the facts and inform, so that people can make up their own minds.

Grubbs Receives Doctorate

Carolyn Grubbs, professor of history, has completed her doctoral work and will graduate May 15 from North Carolina State University. Her degree is a Doctorate of Education in the area of curriculum and instruction with specialty in history education.

She began her doctoral work six years ago while working full-time at Meredith. She is grateful to Meredith for allowing her time off from committee assignments while working on her doctorate.

Dr. Grubbs received her undergraduate degree from Meredith College and her masters degree from Duke University. She came to teach at Meredith in 1963 with plans to work on her doctorate at that point. It was during this time, however, that she met Dr. Frank Grubbs and marriage plans took the place of doctoral studies. She waited on her doctoral work to have two children, who are now in public schools.

Woodrow Wilson Foundation

New Campus Coordinator Named

The Executive Board of the Meredith College Parents Association has voted to underwrite the Visiting Fellows Program of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, making possible a Fellow each semester for the next three years. Dr. Jonathan Lindsey has been appointed the Campus Coordinator to succeed Dean Sarah Lemmon who has served for the past three years.

The Woodrow Wilson Foundation makes available outstanding persons with liberal arts backgrounds who have succeeded in one or more fields of endeavor not necessarily the traditional ones. Most have broad interests such as business, fine arts, and foreign languages. Dr. Johanna Dunn, who visited Meredith for a week in the spring of 1980, held a doctorate in Art history, spoke French and Portuguese, and was a vice-president of the New York Futures Exchange.

Other Fellows included Walter Blass of the New York Telephone Co., the Dudmans whose field is journalism and broadcasting, Mary Vance Trent and Max and Esther Krebs of the United States foreign service, and writer-in-residence Ann Beattie.

Meredith was originally awarded a three-year program partly through the good offices of an alumna, Becky Batson Shaw, Class of 1969, who is on the staff of the Foundation in Princeton, New Jersey. Becky was on campus recently to make a brief evaluation visit and to meet the new coordinator, Dr. Lindsey.
