Meditation Room Secret Revealed

by Sam Carothers
Campus Minister

The Best Kept Secret At Meredith may be the Ellen Brewer Meditation Room in Jones Chapel! This room represents a long standing tradition at Meredith; namely, that of providing a place for students, faculty, and staff to use for quiet reflection and prayer. Much is done at this campus to promote opportunities for corporate or community worship, but often the opportunity for personal worship is overlooked.

Located in the Christina and Seby Jones Chapel, this room is open for use from 6:30 a.m. every morning until the normal closing times for the dorms. It is set aside for those times when you might wish to pull away from the fast pace and pressures of study and work in order to concentrate on your relationship with God. This room is kept free of scheduled activities. Groups are asked not to use this room as a meeting space. Meeting rooms are available in the Chapel through Dr. Mason. The size and intent of the room are such that a number of persons should be able to use the room at the same time without disturbing one another.

The Meditation Room is enhanced by the presence of Bibles, hymnals, a devotional publication — "Alive Now," and art work; all intended to provide an atmosphere for prayer and meditation.

In the hustle and bustle of Raleigh, it's nice to know that there is a place for some peace and quiet. Share the secret of the Ellen Brewer Meditation Room.

We're Working Hard For You!

by Connie R. Morrow
Editor

Your Meredith Christian Association Council has been working hard! September 6-8, the Council spent a weekend at the N.C. Baptist Assembly, Fort Caswell for 3 days of leadership training, as well as some planning sessions for the year. The Rev. Donna Forrester, chaplain for Southeastern Seminary, lead the retreat. Donna helped us to look at our Council positions, our reasons for serving in leadership positions, our talents for serving in leadership positions, our talents and our potentials. We focused on the MCA purpose. With that purpose in mind, we brainstormed. WOW! We've got some great things in store for you and for Meredith. Time was also invested in building a community of friendship among the Council members in hopes that we can plant a growing community of love and friendship throughout Meredith.

We're working hard for you . . . and enjoying every minute of it!
