WINGS holds Pot Luck Supper

Department heads and representatives joined approximately 40 Wings students for a Pot Luck Supper on September 9th. The supper was designed to give students information about the various majors offered at Meredith.

Each department spokesperson gave a brief speech about the major in their discipline along with suggestions for complementary minors. Other topics discussed were job opportunities, scholarship availability, and supportive services offered to students through the Office of Student Development. The event was just as entertaining as it was informative — and the food was outstanding. As Suzie Fox, President of Wings put it, "This has been great! I believe we've started a new tradition at Meredith."

Plans are underway for next year's gathering so if you missed this year's event do make a special effort to attend next year.

According to president Susie Fox, the purpose of WINGS (Women In New Growth Settings) is to give support to the student over twenty-three years old. The organization has over four hundred members that attend Meredith both during the day and evening.

Rather than having scheduled meetings, WINGS has more programs and social events. WINGS will perform the opening act for Cornhuskin', which will take place in October. "We are really excited about it," said Fox. A color analysis will be the topic of the November meeting. Cindy Allen Edwards' mother will be the speaker and will also perform a color analysis on different people.

Even though they are not traditional students, according to Fox, "We get together and socialize like the traditional students."
