Gibbons, Local Writer, Entertained Students with Readings of Work

by Susan Cartrette

Kaye Gibbons read in the Recital Hall at Peace College Monday, Nov. 6. As she read from her second novel A Virtuous Woman, she breathed life into the characters of Ruby and Jack. Her gestures and playfulness showed the ease she felt with this work.

Gibbons appeared more serious and involved reading from the draft of her newest work which should come out "next fall or whenever I finish it, whichever happens first." Lines such as "the eggs is where the chickens laid them" and a description of a child, who chatters nonstop, as being "vaccinated with a phonograph needle" reveal the down-to-earth yet poetic tone of Gibbons' work.

Gibbons was raised in Nash County and now lives in Raleigh with her husband and three children. Her first novel Ellen Foster has been translated into several languages and is a best seller in Europe. While reading from A Virtuous Woman, she described herself as a perfectionist to explain her editing from the text.

Kaye Gibbons is a very personable Southern writer. Addressed by a member of the audience as to whether success had changed her, she quipped only in that before she bought 70% ground beef at Winn-

Inside CCL

Some of you might have been surprised to see library fines listed on your Meredith statements. This is part of our new system of collecting library fines.

The charge for over-due books is 10 cents per day. The fine may be paid in the library at the time the book is returned. However, if the fine is not paid at that time, the charge is added to the student's bill in the accounting office. The fines can then be paid only in the accounting office.

Due dates for books always fall on Wednesdays. Books can be renewed at any time. (Be sure to bring in the book to be renewed.) If you keep these things in mind, maybe you'll never have to pay an over-due fine.
