Cornhuskin' chair leads Class of '93 for four years

by Susan Finley

Carswell Auditorium is crammed with cranky seniors. It's hot. Everyone is talking and no one is listening — that is until a familiar voice rises above the din, calling for attention. Suddenly all eyes are forward and another season of Cornhuskin' is under way.

For the past four years the familiar voice has been that of Mandy Dill, Cornhuskin' chair for the class of 1993. Although Dill and the class of '93 have worked enthusiastically during each Cornhuskin', this year things came together as the Senior class won first place.

in secondary education. She is also a North Carolina Teaching Fellow.

Perhaps the biggest challenge regarding Cornhuskin' is getting organized. A Cornhuskin' committee oversees such activities as props, skit parade, tall tale, songs, hog calling and sweatshirt design. In the early stages ideas for each are selected and set into motion. From there on out a great deal of plotting, planning and organizing takes place. In addition to chairing the Cornhuskin' committee, this year Dill helped with the production of the senior slide show.

According to her roommate Jan Gunn, one way Dill puts things in perspective is with a giant calendar containing all the practice dates, meetings and other important details.

Along with her ability to organize, Dill has experience and enthusiasm in her corner. One of her classmates points out that she "couldn't see anyone else who had the patience and energy" to tackle the job every year.

While it is easy to see that Dill is very successful at motivating others, what has kept her enthusiastic about Cornhuskin' for the past four years? Her roommate explains that Dill feeds off the energy of the Class of 1993.

"Mandy feels motivated by the class," Gunn explains, "she wants them to know she will work hard."

Record amount raised for Penny Barrels

by Amity Brown

Through the Astrotekton Society's Cornhuskin' Penny Barrels, about $2000 was raised by Meredith students to pay for a Dunn, N.C. boy's trip to Disneyworld in Florida.

Six-year-old Brandon Stanley, currently under out-patient treatment for leukemia at UNC-Chapel Hill Memorial Hospital, went to Disneyworld with his grandmothers, Oct. 21, through the Eastern North Carolina chapter of the

Make-A-Wish Foundation.

According to Tammi George, Astros President, the money raised will go to reimburse the money taken from the Make-A-Wish general fund, which paid for Stanley's trip.

"I really think it shows a lot about Meredith, that we are a sharing community, that once we get out in the world we will still give back to our community," George said.

Stanley, along with his parents and other relatives, attended Cornhuskin' Thursday night. He walked out on the island for George to introduce him and was greeted with the chant "Brandon, Brandon!"

"Brandon couldn't understand how everyone knew his name," George said.

Penny Barrels are sponsored by the Astros every year at Cornhuskin'. Each class has its own barrel, and students are urged to contribute during Cornhuskin' week. According to Penny Barrels rules, pennies and paper add to a class' total, while silver subtracts.

This year the Senior class raised the most money ever by a single class with $952.31. The Juniors came in second with $249.12, the Sophomores third with $45.08, and the Freshmen fourth with $34.37. The remainder of the approximately $2000 came from silver put in competing classes' barrels.
